Fundraiser set for deputies

To help defray legal costs for their long court battle with Wayne County, members of Starship Command will stage a benefit jamboree from 2 p.m. until midnight, Sunday, Jan. 10 at the Holiday Inn, Merriman and I-94 in Romulus, for members of the county sheriff's department.

"We believed in what the sheriffs did," said Lois Thompson, "and this is one way to show our appreciation. The legal costs for that battle runs into the thousands of dollars and this benefit is one way of telling them we appreciate their services and help."

There will be five Country Western bands performing and tickets will be available at the door. Tickets are priced at $3 per person. Further information may be obtained by telephoning 563-1550.

Tax-relief bill vetoed

Front-Loading of the property tax relief bill, House Bill 4250, was vetoed by Governor William Milliken on Wednesday, December 30, reported Romulus City Treasurer, Beverly McAnally.

"We have watched this bill with great interest," McAnally said, "because it would have had considerable impact on the staff in the Treasurer's office due to the preparation of documents and adjustment to the roll."

House Bill 4250 would have increased the amount of property tax relief awarded to eligible taxpayers and provided for advance payment of the rebates. Estimated cost of the provisions of the bill was set at $150 million dollars, a major factor in the governor's veto.

As a result of the veto, taxpayers who qualify will file for their rebates as they have in previous years either with their state income tax forms or on forms available in the Assessor's Office in City Hall.

More on city tax bills

Romulus taxpayers whose tax payments were mailed to the Treasurer's office and bear a postmark of December 31, 1981, will be able to claim the payment on their 1981 tax returns, reported Beverly McAnally, Romulus Treasurer.

"Not only did we accept the December 31 postmark but we also honored over-the-counter payments in our office on January 4 to accommodate those who were unable to make the payment at City Hall as a result of the New Year's holiday," she added.

Holiday tragedy

Romulus fire officials speculate that a shortcircuited wire to Christmas lights caused the Monday morning blaze that destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. R.M.

Petrie's dwelling at 35780 Mary. Fire Chief John Wilhide said that although no one was injured, the two-story structure was completely demolished.

Fire mars holidays

What was to be the ending of a beautiful Christmas and Holiday season was marred by fire for the R.M. Petrie family of Romulus.

The Petries, who reside at 35780 Mary, saw all their belongings go up in smoke Monday in a fire which officials say may have been triggered by a short circuited electric wire on the Christmas tree.

According to reports, Mrs. Petrie was taking down Christmas tree ornaments Monday morning when the ladder she was standing on suddenly gave way, hurling her to the floor.

Mrs. Petrie believed she sprained or broke her leg and immediately went to seek help from a doctor.

When she returned, she saw the house in flames.

Firefighters responded to the house at approximately 9:30 a.m. and fought the blaze.

"The floor where the Christmas tree had stood had burned through," said Romulus Fire Chief John Wilhide, "therefore, we're speculating that the fire was caused by a short circuit on the tree. It's a pity, but these things do happen. The house was completely destroyed."

"However, I really can't give an estimate of the total damage and, of course, we're still investigating to find the cause of the blaze."

In an unrelated story, Chief Wilhide said that the winds that struck Romulus and the area did little damage to the city.

"We did have a downed power line that may have - and I repeat - may have caused a fire," said Wilhide, "but there were no injuries directly or indirectly caused by those high winds to my knowledge."

Ill winds

Gunmen rob 3 Romulus gas stations New Year's day

The tornado-like winds that battered southeastern Michigan Monday caused little damage in Romulus and Huron Township, according to officials.

The winds downed power lines and tore roof tops in some communities, however, despite the 45 mile per hour plus storm, the winds didn't create any problems in Huron.

"I think we were really fortunate," said Huron Township Police Chief Joseph Carney. "Although the winds hit us just like it did most of the other communities, we don't have much direct damage from it."

Huron was also spared the crime wave that occurred in Romulus during the first 24-hours of the New Year. Carney said that the "township was relatively quiet. We didn't have any RAs (armed robberies) or anything like that."

Romulus however had its problems. Romulus Police Chief Don Flood said that there were three armed robbery New Year's day and all the victims were gasoline station attendants.

There have been a rash of gas stations holdups in recent weeks.

At 1:55 a.m., a motorist was also robbed by an armed robber in the Van Born and Inkster area, while two black males, armed with a handgun held up the Speedway Station at Wayne and Wick Rd., at approximately 10:30 a.m. Then, the Clark Station, located on Middlebelt east of the Metropolitan Airport was robbed by two men using the modus operandi of the bandits at the Speedway Station.

The hold-up spree continued into the night as a white male, using a handgun, stuck up an employee of the Total Gas Station at Middlebelt and Eureka and escaped with approximately $100.

"Needless to say we're asking any and all citizens who have information about these robberies to step forward," said Chief Flood. "We hope people out there may have seen something that may help us put the robbers behind bars."

Anyone with information about the "gas station robbers" should contact the local police department at 941-8400 or 942-0330.

Chamber is seeking Business Man of Year

Who is the "Business Person of the Year" in Romulus?

The Romulus Chamber of Commerce hopes that you'll help answer that question during the next few weeks. The Chamber is seeking qualified candidates for the honor.

Chamber members, along with various other organizations and residents, are invited to assist the Greater Romulus Chamber of Commerce in seeking the 1982 Business Person of the Year.

This will be the Third Annual Award Dinner Dance, which will be held on Sat., Feb. 27, at the Knights of Columbus Hall in the Burgundy Room.

Doug Baum, the recipient for 1981 will chair the panel of judges to select 1982's Business Person. The other judges are co-chairperson Bill Simonds of Bilmar's Supermarket, who was the first Business Person of the Year (1980); Bill Cox, Farmers Insurance; Dennis Currier, Michigan Oven; and Bill Logan, Pioneer Chemical.

Judging will be based on the individual nominees over-all contributions to the community and services performed in an outstanding and unselfish way. The Chamber would like to encourage everyone to participate. Applications can be obtained at the Chamber office, 35350 Goddard, corner of Wayne Rd., also at the City Hall.

Applications must be received at the Chamber office no later than January 15.

L. Brooks Patterson to appear here

L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County Prosecutor, will make a guest appearance at the Crime Prevention Seminar to be hosted by the Canton Police Department.

The seminar, open to the public, will be held from 1 p.m. until 10 p.m., at Field Elementary School, 1000 Haggerty Rd., in Canton, on Monday, Jan. 11.

Also making guest appearances will be Judge James Garber, of the 35th District Court, and Steve Kellerman, of the Canton Police Department's Canine Division.

Further information about the seminar may be obtained by telephoning 397-3000.

Murder suspect faces court exam Jan. 13

A 37-year-old self-employed Romulus man, accused of the rifle-slaying of a 10-year-old Romulus girl and injuring three other members of the same family, will face preliminary examination Wednesday, Jan. 13 in 34th District Court.

The suspect, Ronald George Taylor Jr., of Romulus, is accused of the first degree murder of Monica Webb, one of two twins of the Webb family that was injured after an altercation at the Webb home located at 11049 Moore.

Taylor also faces charges of five counts of assault with intent to commit murder and one count of using a firearm in committing a felony. He was remanded to Wayne County Jail without bond pending his hearing in the Romulus District Courtroom.

According to Romulus Police Sgt. David Early, Taylor had known the Webb family for little over one month. He had been in the Webb dwelling prior to his arrest and ejected by the Webb family after using profanity.

"The verbal exchange between Taylor and Mr. Webb ended with the suspect leaving the house," said Sgt. Webb. "Taylor reportedly came back and opened fire on the house."

One of the bullets struck Monica Webb, who was watching television with her sisters. A second bullet also struck Monica's twin sister. A brother as well as Mrs. Webb, Eva, was also struck by an estimated 8 to 10 shots fired by the suspect.

Mr. Webb managed to get his family out of the house and drove them to Ann Arbor Hospital in Wayne where Monica was pronounced dead on arrival.

In the meantime, police responded to the scene and heard shooting behind the house. Police said they saw the suspect leap into his vehicle and attempt to escape, but the car became bogged in snow.

Police nabbed the suspect at the scene and confiscated what they believe to be the murder weapon.

Taylor was taken to an out-county courtroom where he was charged on one count of first degree murder, five counts of assault with the intent to murder and one count of felony with a firearm. He stood mute to all charges.

All about your taxes

Michael A. Talbert, a Dearborn Heights CPA, will be at St. Anthony's Church in Belleville 7 p.m. on Sun. Jan. 10 to speak on individual income tax and 1981 changes.

Talbert has a master's degree in taxation from Walsh College in Troy and worked for Internal Revenue Service for 12 years. The presentation will be held in the St. Anthony's School cafeteria.

A question and answer period will follow the talk and refreshments will be served. A donation of $1 is requested.

Council OKs Tax extension deadline

Deadline for the collection of winter taxes was extended to March 1, in a recent action of the Romulus City Council.

Acting on the recommendation of City Treasurer, Beverly McAnally, the Romulus City Council adopted a resolution to extend winter tax collections without penalty from February 15, to March 1.

McAnally said senior citizens and others who qualify for Homestead Property Tax Relief provisions will not be charged the one percent penalty for summer taxes provided that they have filed for the credit and

Van Buren board may face recall

The political storm hovering over Van Buren Township for the past few months erupted last week as a group identified as "Citizens to Recall the Van Buren Board of Trustees" has announced that it will attempt to remove from office all seven members of the board.

Ronald Yurchak, who is spearheading the recall drive, said that his group "is deeply concerned over recent decision by the board which are detrimental to the welfare of the citizens of this township."

Yurchak said the recent appointment of Richard Debs as police commander is "but one example of the callousness shown by the board toward the welfare of this township."

Debs, elevated to the police commander's post after only three months on the force, is the subject of a township investigation. Debs has had several confrontations with law enforcement agencies and is presently being investigated by the Michigan secretary of state's office for reportedly possessing two driver's licenses.

Yurchak said that Debs is not the only reason he and his group are demanding that the entire board be recalled.

"Mr. Debs is the symptom of a disease in the township," Yurchak said. "His (Debs') removal doesn't eliminate the disease. The people of Van Buren Township must cope with the decisions being made by the township board, which put Debs into office."

The petitions will ask for the recall of Township Supervisor Patricia Cullin, Treasurer Tom Welty, Township Clerk Doreen Craven, and trustees Chester Wojcie, Tim Toohey, Fred Domen and Darwin Kureth.

While Domen may be included in the recall at this point, he may not be around to face the voters. Last month he informed the township board that he will resign this month. The board has not acted upon his resignation.

Domen, along with Kureth, were the only two board members who voted against the Debs' appointment.

Debs, who is president of the UAW Local 1776 in Ypsilanti, accepted the part-time police commander's job on Nov. 10. His acceptance allegedly precipitated the early retirement of ex-police chief George Montgomery. (Read today's editorial on Page A-10). Debs is receiving $15,025 per year for his part-time job in Van Buren.

bring a copy of the filing papers with them when they pay their taxes.

Forms are available in the Romulus Assessor's Office.

After March 1, taxes will no longer be accepted in the Romulus Treasurer's office.

"Our books will be closed for audit and preparation for remittance to the County Treasurer's office by the end of March. After that date, delinquent taxes can only be paid at the County Treasurer's office by the end of March. After that date, delinquent taxes can only be paid at the County Treasurer's office in Detroit," McAnally concluded.

George Stewart Renton

George Stewart Renton, one of Belleville's much-loved early pioneers, passed away on Dec. 27, 1981 in Manistique, Michigan where he made his home for the past six years to be close to his family.

Mr. Renton was born in Belleville on May 17, 1894 to James and Margaret (Hulett) Renton—the second child of this union. He lived on Martinsville Road all of his life, except for the past six years. He had one sister, Mary, born in 1890 and one brother, James, born in 1898, both now deceased.

Mr. Renton married Donna Belle (Leonard) on August 16, 1916 in Belleville. She served as Township Clerk for many years and was the first president of the Methodist W.S.C.S. She passed away on September 20, 1975. Donna Belle and George had three children who survive—Marian (Mrs. Wm.) Whichello and Edwin J., both of Gulliver, Mich. and George A. of Goodhart, Mich., 8 grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren and many other relatives and friends.

Mr. Renton was a farmer all of his life in Belleville.

He also drove school bus for the Van Buren School System for 30 years. He was a life member of the Masonic Myrtle Lodge #89, F. &

A.M. for 66 years, a life member of the Eastern Star, a member of the Farm Bureau and the Belleville First United Methodist Church.

Funeral Services were held Dec. 31, 1981 at 1 p.m. at the Roberts Brothers, Inc. Funeral Home in Belleville with the Rev. Joy Arthur officiating. Interment followed at Hillside Cemetery, Belleville.

Beatrice M. West

Funeral services were conducted last week for Beatrice M. West, a retired Romulus school teacher.

A teacher in the local school system for more than 35 years, Beatrice West, 72, passed away on December 30 at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne. Services were held at the John N.

Santeui & Son Funeral Home in Garden City. A graduate of Tusculum College in Tennessee, Beatrice West also received her Masters in Education from the University of Michigan.

She is survived by two sisters Hattie Qualls of Monroe and Daisy Holland, also of Romulus.

John W. Taylor, 71, of Belleville, died Dec. 29, Roberts Bros. Funeral Home, Belleville.

Beatrice M. West, 72, of Romulus, died Dec. 30, Santeui & Sons Funeral Home, Garden City.

Warren B. Busch, 87, of Detroit, died Dec. 27, Baum Funeral Home, Romulus.

Task force to present reform bills

State Rep. Sylvia Skrel (R-Livonia), a member of the House Public Utilities Committee, revealed today that the Utility Reform Task Force will introduce a package of bills designed to revise laws relating to utility regulation in Michigan.

"Testimony has been given before our Public Utilities Committee regarding Draft 10 of the Purchased Gas Adjustment clause bill, the bill I am most interested in as a part of this package," Skrel said. "This bill deals specifically with the automatic pass-through of prices from producers to distributors and in turn represents about 80 percent of the amount customers pay for natural gas."

It has been reported last September that natural gas customers would experience substantial increases in the amount they pay for natural gas as a result of the planned use of Algerian liquefied natural gas.

"The anticipated deliveries of the Algerian LNG have not yet begun," Skrel pointed out. "and those deliveries are not now expected to begin until early next year." Skrel predicted that there would be no substantial increase in customers' heating bills until next March, if the present timetable holds. "Further downward adjustments may even be made to those customers on the Equal Monthly Payment Plan," Skrel added.

"I am optimistic that we will end up with an equitable and balanced package of six bills. But if this legislation is not forthcoming by the time we reconvene in January, I pledge to do all in my power to see that the issue is resolved immediately," the Livonia Republican added.

Pennies net $154 for Ken

The Romulus Senior Council came to the aid of Kenny Musselberg, a 15-year-old Romulus youth who is suffering from a brain tumor.

Members of the Student Council organized a "Penny Drive" which netted more than $150 for the Musselberg drive, according to Marua Adams, President of the Student Council, and Bob Bales, council parliamentarian.

"We placed jars throughout the school and business community and urged persons to donate pennies," said Bales, who added that the recent publicity on the plight of Kenny had urged council to take action.

"Kenny would have been in our school if he hadn't gone through so much therapy, and it was some kind of way to tell him the kids here are backing him in our own kind of way."

To sleep or not to sleep

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Ernest Sorini is chief of Emergency Room Services at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne. BY DR. ERNEST SORINI

I awoke at 5 a.m. this morning to discover that the fig I dreamed I was eating on a beach in the Caribbean was only the soggy nose of my two-year-old son's teddy bear. I further discovered that the peculiar odor of the "fig-ment" of my imagination was, in reality, the diapered derriere of the teddy bear's owner, who is seated on my pillow engaged in a soliloquy with the ura minor whose nose I had just fondled with my taste buds. He was presumably encouraging both myself and the bear to continue this wonderful new game he had invented.

The father of the teddy bear's owner was not, however, so enamored of this sport and so quit the society of this morning menagerie, and spent the next two hours sleeping downstairs on the living room couch, while Jonathan conspired to feed his teddy bear's nose and other parts to my wife (who, by the way, could probably sleep at the General Motors Diesel Engine testing grounds in broad daylight).

Why is it, I wondered that some people, like myself, seem to require so much more sleep than others, even though the strenuousness of the previous days travails may not have exceeded that of the person who requires only a few hours sleep a night (i.e. the teddy bear's owner). Could it be that some people are just lazy and unmotivated, and so sleep more as a substitute for accomplishment? Probably not — some of the laziest most unmotivated people I ever knew could stay awake for two days in a row playing hearts or pinochle, while seated on the edges of their beds at medical school. Five and a-half seconds of sitting on any kind of bed, and I'm as good as a huge target for the sandman who proceeds to dump a whole dumptruck full of a mixture of sand and Sominex on me.

Studies show that the average adult sleeps eight hours a night, and that the average child, under the age of three, sleeps about ten hours a night (unfortunately, my 2½-year-old sons haven't had an opportunity to read these studies yet!); there are, however, many adults who require only three to four hours of sleep per night while others seem to require 10 to 12 hours of sleep so as not to be somnolent during the day. If you feel that you are getting enough sleep at night and are still somnolent or actually falling asleep during the day, you may be: (1) getting too little sleep, (2) suffering from a sleep disorder or depression, or (3) suffering from some other physical ailment which is taxing your body's metabolic storehouse.

One of the least well-understood sleep disorders is narcolepsy. In this disease state, the affected person may actually fall asleep many times a day despite presumably "normal" amounts of sleep the previous night. Some of the other problems which these persons may have are: (a) hypnagogic hallucinations — Visual and/or auditory hallucinations which occur at the onset of sleep. These persons are mentally quite normal during wakefulness, however; (b) sleep paralysis — this consists of the inability to move any limbs at the onset of sleep, and may be quite frightening (especially if in your hypnagogic hallucinations you see lions and tigers coming after you); and (c) cataplexy — this is a generalized muscular weakness which comes on suddenly and seems to follow emotional states in the patient with narcolepsy such as laughing or crying, during which the patient falls helplessly to the ground.

Fortunately, narcolepsy is a relatively rare disorder, and the Mayo Clinic reports that the disease accounts for 1 out of every 8,610 hospital admissions in that institution. Furthermore, the somnolents can usually be relieved in all cases with the use of drugs such as amphetamines and Ritalin.

If you have difficulty staying awake during the day, and feel you are getting enough sleep during the night, contract your doctor. You may be suffering from some sort of sleep disorder like narcolepsy or some other medical problem which is amenable to intervention by a physician. Next week, I will discuss snoring and its sometimes lethal side

Pickering won't re-appoint four department directors

By SUE McDONALD
ANP News Editor

Four department heads and the mayoral assistant will not be a part of the new administration of Westland mayor-elect Charles Pickering, sources said.

Pickering, following interviews with members of outgoing Mayor Thomas F. Taylor's staff, has chosen not to re-appoint Glenn Shaw Jr. as assessor/economic development director, A. Kent Herbert as finance director, Edward Gunther as personnel director and David Wiacek as director of the Department on Aging. Returning to duties at the Westland Police Department will be mayoral assistant Lt. Andrew Spisak.

Pickering also has chosen not to keep the mayor's office staff.

Pickering, in announcing the re-organization, said the decision not to re-appoint the four directors was in the best interest and due to "their incompatibility with my goals for the city and my administration."

To fill in the holes created by his decision, Pickering will move Department of Public Service Director Robert Matzo into the assessor-economic development director's position.

Matzo has been with the city for more than eight years, serving as finance director under former mayor Eugene McKinney and Mayor Thomas Taylor. He was transferred to the Department of Public Service in 1980, following the sudden death of then DPS director William Engle.

Pickering said he decided to move Matzo to that department because "it is an area I feel I needed to put an experienced city official in to get the job done." "He's shown he can accomplish the goals of my administration," he added. Matzo will assume his new post as of Jan. 4, when City Hall re-opens after the New Year's holiday.

Pickering will be bringing Joseph Hawrylak, his campaign manager, on board as the new finance director, if Hawrylak is successful in garnering a leave of absence from his present employer, the Cadillac Motor Division of General Motors.

Hawrylak has been with Cadillac for 20 years and currently serves as manager of employee and office services. According to Pickering he has extensive management and labor relations experience and has helped negotiate three contracts with the UAW at Cadillac.

A resident of the Westland community for 20 years, he holds a bachelor's degree in business administration with a major in management.

Pickering said he decided to go with Hawrylak because of "a strong personnel and management" experience which fits in with his reorganization plan.

Citing budget Director Larry Williams' expertise in finance, Pickering said he will transfer much of the responsibility of the personnel department to the finance director, with the other directors assuming some of the responsibilities for their individual departments.

"I intend to re-organize the personnel department with the possibility of eliminating the department entirely," Pickering explained. "and I feel Joe's experience and ability to deal with personnel functions and negotiations will provide for a strong combination for the finance department."

Negotiations in fact an item the new administration will face this year with all city employee contracts expiring either June 30 or Sept. 30.

"Joe will be valuable in heading negotiations, especially in these hard economic times," Pickering said.

He added that the lack of replacement of the personnel director is the first step by his administration "to eliminate the high cost of administration." Hawrylak will have the job of handling Pickering's re-organization plan. He most likely will assume his new position in mid-January or early February.

Also joining Pickering's administrative staff will be Henry Lundquist, former city councilman and an unsuccessful candidate for mayor in the September primary election. Following his loss, Lundquist threw his support behind Pickering, who challenged State Rep. Thomas Brown for the mayor's seat.

Lundquist had worked for the firm which currently holds the city's rubbish collection contract. He now works for a trucking firm.

The mayor-elect believes that Lundquist's experience and "his involvement with the city" makes him "an important part of my administration."

Not being replaced along with Gunther was Wiacek. In fact, the directorship of the department on aging will be assigned temporarily to Parks and Recreation Director Ralph Tack. Pickering intends to maintain the department's activities, while cutting administrative costs. He stressed that a full evaluation will be conducted in regards to the organization and activities of the department and that recommendations will be made pertaining to the department's future during budget deliberations later next year.

The way to go

The Belleville Fred C. Fisher Library, once an obstacle course for the handicapped, has a new look today as rails and a corridor have been installed to provide easy access to those handicapped and/or in wheelchairs. Because of recent federal legislation to make public buildings readily accessible the handicapped, funds were made available to complete the needed renovations.

8 car windows shattered

Vandals go on spree during Holidays

While most Inkster residents were enjoying the Christmas Holidays, vandals went on a spree and shattered several car windows in the Glenwood Street area.

The car windows were broken with a sharp instrument, according to police reports on Dec. 28. Police said they have no suspects in custody.

Police also said a man was robbed at knifepoint as he left Benn's Store, 1150 Middlebelt. The victim reported to police that three young men approached him shortly after 5:30 p.m. Tuesday as he left the store.

One of the men produced a knife, according to the victim, and demanded money. The victim said he handed over his wallet and the men also took his ring and watch.

"We don't have any suspects," said Sgt. Susan Bosshard "and the victim didn't see a getaway car. The case is under investigation."

Although there has been incessant snow, the Inkster Accident Bureau reports that the Christmas Eve and Christmas Day passed with "relatively few accidents. None of any serious nature."

"We did have a rash of fenderbenders, however," police said.

time they did not get all nine; one was absent from the meeting.

According to Geula: "We are witnessing a systematic and well-orchestrated campaign to annihilate the Baha'i religion in the land of its origin."

News of these arrests comes only a few days after reports of the confiscation of more Baha'i properties and the destruction of another Baha'i Shrine in Iran. Authorities expropriated the Baha'i cemetery in Tehran, leaving thousands of Baha'is there without a place to bury their dead. The house of the Baha'i religion's prophet-founder in Takur, known as the House of Baha'u'llah, was destroyed, and the land and gardens surrounding the shrine were offered for sale to the public.

Scores of local Baha'i leaders have been arrested and executed for practicing their religion, during the last 18 months. Their charges have included such spurious accusations as "creating discord and disunity amongst Moslems" and fighting God and his Messenger," Ceula said.

"Iranian authorities fail to realize that their assaults on the Baha'i leadership have not produced the intended result of demoralizing the Baha'i community," Geula asserted. "In every instance, Baha'is have elected new leaders to replace those executed or incarcerated."

Rank and file Baha'is also have been the victims of persecution aimed at forcing them to recant their faith. Reports of sudden arrests, the confiscation of personal property, the seizure of Baha'i-owned businesses, the looting of Baha'i homes, the deprivation of livelihoods and educational opportunities, abductions and other forms of intimidation have persisted over the last two years.

Since its inception in Iran 137 years ago, the Baha'i religion has aroused the opposition of Iran's fundamentalist clergy, who regard the religion as a heresy. Baha'is believe that the founder of their religion, Baha'u'llah, is the most recent prophet of God. His teachings about the common foundation of the world's religions, the oneness of all the races of humankind, the equality of men and women, and the necessity of establishing a world government for the maintenance of a lasting peace have stirred the violent opposition of the fundamentalist elements in Iran.

Baha'i blasts Iran

Eight national leaders of Iran's persecuted Baha'i religious minority were arrested Dec. 20 as they met in a private home, according to Changiz Geula of the Spiritual Assembly of Detroit. They were holding a session of the National Baha'i governing body, when authorities seized them along with two other Baha'is. Two women are among the 10 detainees spirited away to an undisclosed place.

"This is the second group of national Baha'i leaders taken into custody," Geula said, "and it is clear that authorities intend to pursue their diabolical scheme to destroy the Baha'i community by cutting down its leadership." In August 1980, revolutionary guardsmen arrested all nine members of the national Baha'i assembly, and authorities have consistently disavowed any knowledge of their whereabouts. This

Completes academy

Lt. Leonard Grabowski of Wayne recently graduated from the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Virginia, following 11 weeks of executive level training in contemporary law enforcement. Grabowski joins Director of Public Safety Ray LeCornu, Deputy Director Fred Stafford and Sgt. John Wright as FBI Academy graduates from the Wayne Police Division.

Grabowski finishes FBI Academy

Lt. Leonard Grabowski of Wayne's Department of Public Safety, Police Division, was among 249 recent graduates of the FBI National Academy in Quantico, Virginia.

Graduation ceremonies concluded 11 weeks of executive level training for officers from each of the 50 states, as well as from seven foreign countries, six U.S. military organizations and six federal civilian operations.

Since its inception in 1935, the FBI National Academy has graduated 15,640 officers, including Wayne's Director of Public Safety Ray LeCornu, Deputy Director Fred Stafford and Sgt. John Wright.

"I'm confident that Leonard will derive personal satisfaction from his study and acquaintances at the academy," said LeCornu, the first officer from Wayne to graduate from the academy. "The City of Wayne will benefit from his having attended."

Lt. Grabowski, who has served on the Wayne Police Division for 12½ years, resides in Wayne with his wife, Jill, and three children — Jennifer, 14, Jacqueline, 14, and Michael, 11.

The FBI National Academy is designed to meet the needs of contemporary law enforcement in such disciplines as management, law, forensic science, education and communication arts and behavioral sciences. More than 10,000 graduates remain active in law enforcement and approximately one of every seven holds a top executive post in their agency.

Slides provide senior citizens with information on prescription drugs

A large number of senior citizens turned out for an informative slide-lecture last week entitled "Prescription and non-prescription Medication."

Sponsored by the Canton Parks and Recreation — Senior Citizens, the program was held at the Recreation Center and featured Doris Fishman, clinical director of the Oakwood Hospital Pharmacy.

She presented the 45-minute slidelecture and then held a question and answer session. In her presentation, she covered all the essential information that all patients must have in order to use their medications in a rational, safe manner.

Some of the topics included: Interpretation of labels; time of administration; method of administration; medication storage; foods and medications that may interact and unexpected ingredients in some medications.

Several pharmacists were on hand for individual patient medication consultation and discussed with senior citizens some of their personal concerns. Also, basic health tests were given during the day, including screening that included checking height, weight, blood pressure, pulse and urine analysis.

Dr. Barry Galison, a podiatrist, was on hand for two hours to give free examination and consultation with those present.

"We were happy with all those who attended the program and everyone found it very interesting and informative," said Delores Edwards, Senior Citizens Co-ordinator.

"It was so successful and popular in fact, that many talked of having another program like it in the future."

To conserve energy

Gas company teams up with Churches

Michigan Consolidated Gas Company, the Michigan Catholic Conference, the Michigan Council of Churches and the Rabbinical Commission of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Detroit have announced a joint program designed to improve the energy efficiency of religious buildings in Michigan.

It is estimated that more than 10,000 churches in Michigan could benefit from energy-efficiency improvements and hold down operating costs.

The effort is the first of its kind in Michigan and the first concerted attempt by any of the state's major utilities to extend energy conservation efforts beyond the scope of residential conservation.

"Michigan's religious organizations are an important part of the communities we serve," said Richard Zemmin, Vice President of Public Affairs for Michigan Consolidated. "Our cooperation with church leaders in improving the energy efficiency of religious buildings is another major step along the road to an energy-efficient future."

The central feature of the joint effort is a booklet called "Controlling Energy Costs in Religious Buildings," which was researched and published by Michigan Consolidated and recommended for use by the Michigan Catholic Conference, the Michigan Council of Churches and the Rabbinical Commission of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Detroit and other state church organizations.

"We're hopeful that these efforts will go far in helping these groups and their members control energy costs in these difficult economic times," Zemmin said.

Michigan Consolidated serves more than one million customers in the Grand Rapids and Muskegon areas, in Detroit, Wayne and Washtenaw counties and some 400 smaller communities in the northern Lower Peninsula and Upper Peninsula.

Did you win a ham?

Fourteen area residents had ham to serve during the holidays after being selected as winners in a holiday ham contest sponsored by area merchants.

The winner at Maria's Bakery Italian in Canton Township was Gerald E. Thebeau of Canton Township, while Grace Frank of Lincoln Park won her ham at Cherry Hill Lanes.

At Westgate Auto Parts in Westland, the winner was Bob Browne of Livonia, with Kim Baker of Livonia winning at Blazo's Pie Shop in Westland.

The Country House Barbeque Family Restaurant pulled Richard Blackmore's name from their contest box. He's from Romulus.

At P.D.Q. Printing in Belleville the winner was Karen Smith of Belleville, and Debbie Culp of Wayne won her holiday ham at LaPapillon in Wayne.

Daly Drive-In Westland had Anne Exford of Westland as its winner, with Deanna Mays winning of Inkster at Michigan-Middlebelt Party Store, Tom Carey of Westland at the One-Hour Martinizing, and Sue Stewart of Dearborn Heights at Pinter's Plants and Produce.

Wayne Bank had Juanita Alexander of Romulus as its winner, and a holiday ham went to Ailene Horner of Garden City at Wayne Party Store and Wild Bill's Fun Center, both in Wayne.

Winterfest Run set

America's greatest spectator sports attraction — The Super Bowl — will mate with America's greatest participant sport — jogging — on Super Bowl Saturday, Jan. 23, 1982 — just 30 hours before — and only a few miles away from — the kickoff of Super Bowl XVI in the Pontiac Silverdome.

The marriage will give birth to the NFL Alumni Winterfest Run at 10 a.m. in Clarkston and will trigger a wedding reception filled with nostalgia, sprinkled with plenty of human interest as runners come face-to-face with the legends of pro football history.

Super Bowl heroes of the past will join NFL Alumni celebrities in either officiating or participating in the four-mile run open to all runners 14 and over or in the One-Mile Kids Run open to all runners age 13 and under at the Pine Knob Ski Resort.

Earl Morrall, a three-time Super Bowl winner from the Baltimore Colts and Miami Dolphins; Ray Nitschke, a two-time Super Bowl winner from the Green Bay Packers, and Ray Mansfield, a two-time Super Bowl winner from the Pittsburgh Steelers will be among the NFL Alumni celebrities.

In addition to hobnobbing and-or competing with the legends of pro football, runners will have a chance to win two Super Bowl Tickets, an array of NFL Alumni merchandise, trophies and NFL Alumni medals. Proceeds will benefit four Detroit-area, youth-oriented charities — The Arthritis Foundation.

The American Diabetes Association, Children's Leukemia, and the Hemophilia Foundation.

The Winterfest Run is sponsored by the NFL Alumni Inc., a non-profit, tax-exempt, charitable and educational organization of former professional football players who have dedicated themselves to the motto: Caring for Kids.

Wayne Memorial conducts college aid workshop

Students and parents of local public and parochial high school seniors are invited to attend a college financial aid workshop being sponsored by the Guidance Department of Wayne Memorial High School.

The workshop will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 6, in the lecture hall of the high school, located on Glenwood at Fourth Street in Wayne.

On hand will be a financial aid officer, who will review the financial aid picture for the coming year and will go through the financial aid form item by item, required by all colleges, if a student is to be considered for financial aid.

All additional forms of financial aid, including the Michigan Competitive Scholarship, tuition grants, Pell grants, Legislative Merit Awards, Tuition Differential Grant and Michigan Guaranteed Loan, will be discussed and all questions answered.

Parents interested in special assistance programs, such as Social Security Aid and Bureau of Indian Affairs financial aid, will be able to find out who to contact and what procedure to follow through the workshop.

In previous years the annual parent-student assistance program has provided a considerable amount of information on financial aid, according to organizers.

Cope with winter driving - play it safe!

A driver's ability to cope with winter traction problems is directly related to the motorist's determination to reduce the risks.

This is the contention of a nationally recognized accident investigator and authority on accident reconstruction — Archie H. Easton.

Easton's other qualifications for helping you survive the worst that winter can throw your way include 30 years of service as director of the University of Wisconsin's Motor Vehicle Research Laboratory and 13 years as chairman of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards.

Easton is currently serving as consulting engineer for Safety Engineering Associates, a Madison, Wisconsin, firm specializing in automotive accident investigation and product liability.

"If I have a choice," Easton asserts, "I'll ride with a driver who buckles-up the minute he slides behind the wheel of his vehicle. That driver has not succumbed to the often disastrous attitude that 'it-can't-happen-to-me.'"

Easton's point: the driver who recognizes the value of safety restraints — for himself, his passengers and his children — also understands that the restraint system will keep the people in his vehicle from being thrown around inside his car in case of a skid/wreck situation regardless of who's at fault.

He stands a better chance of keeping control of himself and his car and that, according to Easton, is making a choice that lowers the risks.

Other safeguards include the type of tires and traction aids the motorist puts between his vehicle and icy or snowy road surfaces.

Easton cited skid test findings developed over years of research:

A tire's traction ability is related more to tread design and compound than to its construction. In short, either a radial or bias belted with a standard highway tread will perform about equally well on winter slick surfaces.

Conventional snow tires (without studs) show little or no improvement in stopping ability on ice when compared to regular tires. However, as their name suggests, snow tires perform considerably better on loosely packed snow, where they produce 51 percent better pulling or traction ability than regular highway tires. On glare ice, their traction ability is about 28 percent better than regular tires.

Studded snow tires on the rear wheels (where their use is permitted) reduce stopping distances on ice by about 19 percent.

The old-standby — reinforced tire chains — is still best. They reduce braking distances on ice by 50 percent. They produce from four to seven times the pulling ability of conventional tires on snow and ice.

Some new models — down-sized and front wheel drive — require limited clearance chains (type PL chains). Your dealer or mechanic can recommend the proper type.

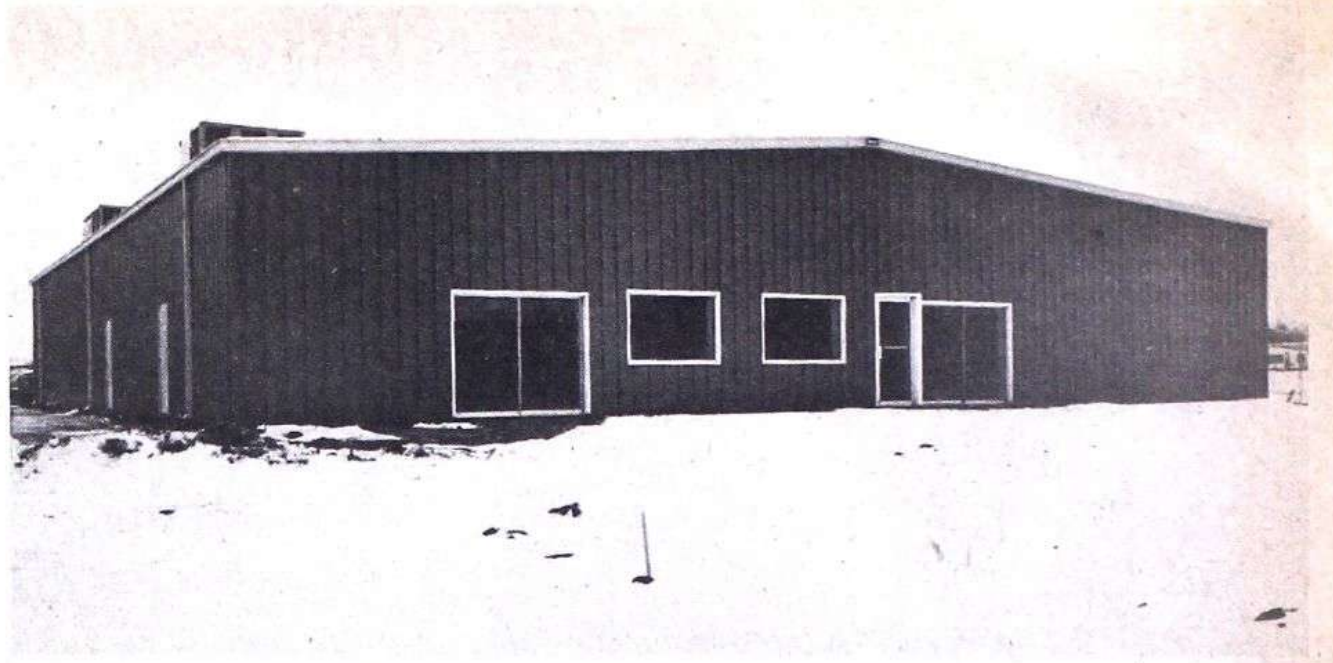

Another caution Easton emphasized is the fact that snow tires must be radials if the other tires on the non-drive wheels are radials. Otherwise a dangerous "fish-tailing" or other instability can result causing the driver to lose control of the vehicle.

"Regardless of the type of traction aid used," Easton warned, "at no time on snow or ice will the resulting traction be near that of conventional tires on dry pavement."

As an example of the differences, Easton commented that 20 mph on an icy stretch may produce a stopping distance equal to that resulting from a speed of 60 mph under normal dry pavement conditions.

Getting the "feel" of the road is recommended — gently trying the brakes or using short bursts of acceleration to find out if and when the tires slip or spin. When they do, the driver must slow down and do all maneuvering with a delicate touch — on the steering wheel, on the accelerator, and on the brake pedal.

Easton concluded: "The driver who understands how to improve traction and reduce risks stands the best chance of avoiding skid accidents on winter slick road surfaces."

The Lions are coming

With the exterior of the building constructed, the Belleville Moose will soon be moving to their new dwelling on Belleville Lake. The Moose members recently raised money for the new house after selling the old establishment in the city. One member said that if all goes well, the new structure should be ready for its occupants by March.

Warning: Thin ice can be fatal

Michigan residents and visitors were given a seasonal reminder today by State Police Director, Col. Gerald L. Hough, about the potential danger to persons who venture onto thin ice on outdoor water areas in early winter.

Hough said Michigan water accident statistics in the past have shown that non-boating accidents each year include some deaths caused by falls through ice.

Because winter ice sometimes may look stronger than it is, Hough advised outdoor enthusiasts that ice thickness should be tested for safety where any doubt exists. Be wary of areas where moving water under ice may keep the ice surface dangerously thin, he added, pointing out that these unsafe spots generally would be on rivers or streams or over spring areas of ponds and at the inlet and outlet locations on lakes.

In view of upcoming school vacations as well as at other winter times, Hough urged parents to be especially vigilant in warning children about outdoor ice dangers, suggesting supervision be provided in play areas as necessary.

To safely bear the weight of individuals or small groups of persons, outdoor ice on lakes, rivers, ponds, etc., should be from two to four inches thick. For heavier weights, such as snowmobiles, thickness should range from five inches and up for protection purposes.

Hough stressed that there should be provisions made for emergency rescue as part of any outdoor activity involving ice-covered water areas.

IRA accounts at Standard Federal Savings help you save more for your retirement.

IRA

The new tax law provides that every working person under age 70½ can contribute to an Individual Retirement Account for taxable years beginning in 1982. You can have an IRA Account even if you are covered by another retirement plan. Your contributions to an IRA Account are tax deductible. This allows you to accumulate more money with an IRA Account than with a taxable investment.

Regular IRA

Allows a working person to contribute up to a maximum of $2,000 per year. A husband and wife who are both working may each contribute up to a maximum amount of $2,000 from their annual income.

Spousal IRA

A working person with a non-working spouse may contribute up to $2,250 per year.

IMPORTANT: at Standard Federal Savings...

- YOU CAN transfer ("roll-over") the funds you receive as a lump sum distribution from a qualified retirement fund and defer taxation on the transferred funds until your retirement years.
- YOU CAN transfer funds from an IRA Account established elsewhere.
- YOUR EMPLOYER CAN also contribute funds to employee IRA Accounts by establishing a Simplified Employee Pension Plan (SEP).

IRA Accounts are insured to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Variable Rate Accounts:

Current rate
11.658%
per year

Available thru January 11, 1982

You can also choose a 1½ year variable rate certificate account with quarterly compounding and a minimum deposit of $10. Interest is paid at a rate equal to the average auction rate on a discount basis for 13-week U.S. Treasury Bills. Each Tuesday during the 1½ year term, the rate will change on your account based on this Treasury Bill rate.

Additions in amounts of $10 or more can be made to your variable rate account at any time without extending the account term. If your employer has a payroll deduction plan with Standard Federal Savings, your IRA contribution can be made automatically each pay period and deposited to this account.

Also Available for IRA Accounts:

- 26-Week Money Market Certificates
- Savings Certificates of $100,000 or More at Market Rates
- 2½ Year Money Market Certificates
- Regular Passbook Savings Accounts

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal from certificate accounts, and withdrawals from your IRA Account prior to age 59½ may result in tax penalties. When you withdraw the money in your IRA Account at retirement after age 59½, your withdrawals will be taxed as ordinary income at a time when your tax rate is likely to be lower.

Property taxes high - here's reasons why

By EDWARD E. MAHALAK
State Representative

Property tax bills can come as a shock, and when they do, property owners may not be sure what to do about them or where and how to protect them.

A bill approved by the House and Senate would provide for more of this type of information to property owners.

It would require assessors to send valuation notices to the owner of each parcel of property at least 10 days before the first meeting of the local board of review. Notices would have to show the assessed valuation of the property for the year and for the previous year.

It would also have to show the classification of the parcel, the schedule of meetings of the board of review, the state equalized valuation for the previous year, the tentative equalized valuation for the previous year, and the difference between them.

The bill would require the assessor to figure the tentative equalized valuation by multiplying each assessment by the tentative equalization factor provided by county equalization directors from State Tax Commission data.

The notice would have to explain the procedures for appealing assessments to the board of review and the State Tax Tribunal, how to claim credits against the state income tax for excess property taxes, and the requirements local governments must meet if they wish to collect increased operating revenues brought about by increased assessments.

The bill would also require the state to pay local governments on February 1 forty cents for each assessment notice mailed in 1982, and enough to cover first class postage for each notice as of February 1. Local governments would have to claim these reimbursements by March 1.

What does all this mean to the taxpayer?

It requires that assessment notices be sent to the owners of all property on the tax rolls. (Present law requires only that assessors mail notices to owners of property on which valuation has been increased.)

The bill would ensure that taxpayers have timely information to prepare protests before local boards of review, and prevent "surprise" tax increases due to state equalized valuation adjustments.

Local assessors would have to reveal the difference between their valuations and those arrived at through equalization and prepare and explain why their assessments did not reach 50 percent of true cash value as required by law.

Use of tentative equalized valuation is an important protection for property owners. Because official equalization takes place after boards of review have ceased to meet for the year, homeowners have lost the chance to protest tax increases to local officials.

Most do not realize that they can protest assessments to the State Tax Tribunal before July 1.

The best way to prevent surprise equalization tax increases is to require that notices containing all pertinent assessment and equalization information be sent to every property owner regardless of whether or not assessments have been increased.

21 deaths

1980-81 was 'bad year' for snowmobilers

Snowmobiling in Michigan in the 1980-81 winter season resulted in 21 deaths and 438 persons injured in 492 accidents, according to the State Police traffic services division summary. Annual average in the period 1970-80 is 28 deaths.

Compared with the previous season, the totals were a decrease of seven in deaths, and increase of 51 in the number injured and 77 in accidents.

Registrations of snowmobiles in Michigan total about 467,036. Unknown is the number of machines which are operated on private property and require no registration.

Of the persons killed last season, 18 were in the 10-44 age group while three were older. Of the number injured, 371 were in the 10-44 bracket.

The breakdown of major categories of accidents included overturning 70, and other non-collision, 77. Collisions with fixed objects total 156, with motor vehicles in transport, 139, with parked motor vehicles, 24, with pedestrians, five, with animals, six, and with other objects, 15.

Of the accidents, the majority, or 336, involving 18 deaths, occurred in off-roadway areas while 156 happened on roadways, involving three deaths.

The light factor in the accident total included daylight, 231, darkness/no lights, 226, darkness with lights, 10, dawn/dusk, 21, and light condition not stated, four.

Accident death and injury totals for the past 10 years are as follows:

Year	Deaths	Injuries	Accidents
1971-72	30	1,969	2,028
1972-73	25	1,543	1,555
1973-74	33	1,388	1,488
1974-75	39	1,336	1,436
1975-76	23	1,046	1,156
1976-77	24	852	943
1977-78	34	894	1,018
1978-79	25	734	811
1979-80	28	387	415
1980-81	21	438	492

When roads become icy...slow down

The arctic winds that battered southeastern Michigan caused a rash of auto accidents, like the one above. Local police and rescue units worked overtime on Monday as sleet and snow caused havoc for drivers and created hazardous driving conditions, unfortunately for the driver in the vehicle above. However, police said the driver of the car escaped with only minor injuries. They warn residents to keep driving at a minimum as road conditions aren't expected to improve for the next few days. Two more inches of snow were predicted for the area yesterday.

Special seminar

Smoker can kick habit

Smokers who want to start the year out right by quitting smoking will have their chance next week under Dr. Arthur Weaver's stop-smoking clinic. He along with John Swanson, health education specialist, will be conducting a stop-smoking clinic in the Livonia area. The program will begin Monday, January 4 and run through January 8, at 7:30 P.M. in the Franklin High School, 31,000 Joy Rd., Livonia.

Dr. Arthur Weaver is a Wayne State

University Professor of surgery, and is active in the Wayne County Council on Smoking and Health. Weaver is best known for his long-standing fight against tobacco.

John Swanson, M.P.H. is the program coordinator for Better Living Seminars (a non-profit corporation) which has educational aims in the fields of nutrition, exercise, & health. Together they have helped over 60,000 smokers quit in the Detroit Area alone.

The upcoming clinic will last for five evenings, and will consist of lectures, audio-visuals, and group interaction. Each participant will receive a personal "control booklet" with instructions and encouragement programmed for each day of the withdrawal program.

"Every aspect of living has become incorporated into the smoking habit", says Swanson, "And this clinic disentangles the smoker's entire lifestyle. We find that smokers actually enjoy the week! Our real pay comes when we see how grateful people are to be rid of the dirty habit."

For more information call 459-2028.

WCC registration set

Registration is under way now for winter term 1982 classes at Washtenaw Community College. Regular registration continues Monday through Friday, through January 8.

Hours for registration are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, with an evening registration-period Thursday, January 7 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The late registration period begins Monday, January 11 and continues through Saturday, January 16. A $5 late fee will be charged students who register during this time.

Hours for late registration are from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 4 p.m.

Vinyl Wizards

Belleville couple open new business

With the opening of their new business, Vinyl Wizards, Charles and Evelyn Pullen, 49851 W. Huron River Dr., Belleville, are making available a new service for local residents.

"We decided on vinyl and leather repair because there seems to be a need for it here in our home area," they said.

"We live in a world of vinyl and naughty-type plastics. You see it almost everywhere in offices, restaurants, homes, cars, boats, and other uses. It frequently becomes torn, cut or burned. We feel that we can professionally repair that material, usually on the customer's premises, saving him money and time. Our process involves fusing the material together, matching the grain and then matching the color or colors."

The couple chose the name "Vinyl Wizards" because in many instances the repair will be invisible. A big advantage to the customer is saving up to 80% of the cost of replacement or re-upholstery.

For the past five years Evelyn has worked as a saleslady for a local realtor. Charles owned a sales promotion business for 20 years.

Pickering to ax dept. heads

A position that is currently vacant, and which will remain vacant, is housing and community development. Those duties are being handled by Gene Hudson, director of Youth Energy Services. The new mayor will be evaluating combining YES and community development and also will be looking closely at the city's rehabilitation program.

Pickering said the program appears to be understaffed and that its guidelines may need to be rewritten. There also is a possibility that money from the Community Development Block Grant Program may be used to increase the staff, since funding for rehabilitation comes through CD.

Pickering also will not be filling his administrative assistant position. A major reason is that the salary for the position was not included in the 1981-82 budget. Spisak was on special assignment from the Police Department and drew his salary from the latter.

There also will be a change in the city attorneys, with Pickering opting for a member of the Nellis, Jahr and Steffen law firm rather than current city Attorney C. Charles Bokos.

"I feel the city attorney is one of the most key positions of my administration and a position of absolute trust and loyalty," he said.

WHAT IS HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

High blood pressure occurs when the pressure the heart needs to pump blood is higher than normal. People who have untreated high blood pressure are more likely to suffer from heart disease and stroke. High blood pressure can be detected with regular blood pressure checks. The risk of heart disease and stroke can be reduced with treatment to control high blood pressure. Contact the Michigan Heart Association for more information.

ANTI-BRACE FOOD

Kids have a way of destroying the indestructible. Johnnie had a beautiful set of braces. Should have stayed in place until the day of reckoning. But Johnnie was a kid. It was a hot day and he was trying to break an ice cube with his teeth. Pop went the ice-cube — Pop went the braces!

Of course, with the evidence gone (melted) and the braces in Johnnie's hand, it's easy to lay blame on the orthodontist for placing the braces on improperly. True, orthodontists are only human and this can happen—but most of the time, braces that come loose in treatment are not due to this factor, but rather to the type of food the patient eats (or tried to pulverize). Hard foods, like candies, French bread crusts, hard vegetables, ice cubes, etc. can all fracture the cement that holds the brace to the tooth thereby causing a loose brace. Sticky foods, like chewy candies can do the same thing. Special attention has to be paid to the kind of food eaten in order to preserve the braces and the teeth that the braces are hooked onto.

Sharing Season

The students and staff of the Virginia Farrell Beauty School in Wayne showed they had the spirit of sharing this Christmas season, when they gathered toys and clothing that were contributed to residents of the Living Center in Wayne. An annual effort for the beauty school, located in Wayne, this year's contributors included Frank Asani (from left), Anne Marie Miller, Jemmie Pernell, Mrs. Leona Nelson, manager of the school, Marti Senczek, Mary Anne Berry, Andre Healey, Chris Baker and Cindy Townsend. —ANP photo.

Exercise, conditioning needed before Winter Sports activity

A full season of winter sports fun should be the reward for sports buffs who get a head start on conditioning their bodies, according to the Automobile Club of Michigan.

"Cross-country and downhill skiing and other winter sports activities require sports enthusiasts to get in shape before beginning these strenuous activities," stated Walter Zeiler, Auto Club's MemberLife manager. "Lack of proper preparation could cause injuries severe enough to halt a person's winter sports participation."

"Conditioning the muscles used in a particular sport is the best way to avoid injuries and work toward peak performance," Zeiler said. "Amateurs should not expect overnight results since world-class skiers often put in 15 years of work before qualifying for Olympic teams."

Cross-country skiing primarily is an endurance sport which requires strength and stamina. It involves heavy use of arms and shoulders and the muscles which control the waist, abdomen, buttocks, calves and ankles.

"Jogging is a good conditioner for building up endurance for cross-country skiing," Zeiler said.

Downhill skiing requires power, balance and agility. It places the greatest stress on the waist, abdomen and thighs.

Leg strength is important to safe and skillful downhill and cross-country skiing. Fatigue reduces balance and agility and increases the odds for falls which may result in injury.

Auto Club recommends the following to prepare for both types of skiing and other winter activities.

- Push-ups for arms and shoulders.
- Sit-ups and side jumps for the waist and abdomen.
- Leg lunges and squats for buttocks.
- Toe lifts for calves and ankles.
- Squats and side jumps for thighs.

"Warm-up exercises are essential to relax muscles which naturally tense in cold weather," explained Zeiler. "Tensed muscles mean greater risk of injury, especially during the first few minutes of activity, and a lowered level of skill."

"There is also the risk of overworking the heart when vigorous exercise is begun without a well-paced warm-up," he added.

Experts recommend a few minutes of mild, large-muscle activities gradually increasing in intensity before strenuous workouts. Muscle stretching also will help increase limberness and flexibility. Stretches should be part of both warm-ups and cool-downs after sports activities.

"Pushing a car out of a snowbank and shoveling snow are among winter activities which can be strenuous and merit warm-up exercises," said Zeiler. "Auto Club's Winter Energy Fun Guide shows that an hour of moving heavy, wet snow can require more energy than an hour of downhill skiing."

Winter sports wardrobes also should be "shaped up" before activities are started. Clothing should be targeted for maximum warmth and items should be lightweight and fit comfortably.

January surge in runaways expected

The traditional holiday season is not always a time of joy — for some youths, it is the climax of a simmering family crisis that prompts them to run away from home.

Nationally, more than a million young people run away from home each year. The National Center for U.S. Department of Public Health has estimated that at least one in every 10 children between ages 12 and 17 leaves home at some time. In Michigan, estimates are that at least 10,000 youngsters a year need help because they have run away from home, or are considering it. They are cold, hungry and lost — perhaps in many ways.

Barbara Morton, program director of RAP LINE, a 24-hour toll-free assistance center for displaced youngsters, says she and her staff of counselors expect a surge in contacts from kids who have run away from home during or soon after the Christmas-New Year's Day break. Local runaway shelters deal with their heaviest caseloads during the first two weeks of January.

"For some children, this is the time when abuse or neglect problems reach a crisis because they are stuck in the home with the other family members for several days and have no escape, such as school," Morton explained.

The RAP LINE number is 1-800-292-4517.

At least one of 14 staff counselors is on hand at all times to talk to youths, parents, friends or other persons involved in or aware of family crises. The toll-free help is available for virtually anyone in Michigan, the first state to offer such a service.

The average age of a runaway child is 15 years old. The average time the children are away from home is from three to four days — some youngsters return home almost immediately, though, and some never return home.

"The more often a young person runs and the longer he or she is gone, the less likely it is that the child will return home," Morton said.

Runaway programs in Michigan do not aid in the breakup of families, she said. Although the first priority is to protect the child, the next goal is to work toward reconciliation.

"In Michigan, runaway programs have succeeded in returning about 85 percent of the young people with whom they work to their homes," Morton said. "Of the remaining 15 percent, many are running from homes that are less safe for them than the streets."

Surprisingly, she said, the RAP LINE receives very few crank calls. Also interesting is the fact that about 40 percent of their contacts are from parents looking for their children, or from other adults, such as friends of the family or school counselors, who are worried about conflict in a family they know. The rest of the calls have come from youngsters who are either thinking about running away, or who have already left their homes.

"We have gotten a lot of calls from kids who are potential runaways — they are unhappy with their situations at home because of emotional stress, actual abuse or perhaps perhaps because a divorce is pending," Morton said.

"They want to leave home because they don't feel they can cope with the situation, but they call us to see if there are any alternatives. If they can't find a way to resolve or cope with the problem at home we can tell them where shelter and counseling is available."

"We try to get communications going again," she said. "But we also tell the people who call about the state Protective Services program and that we are required by the Child Protection Act to report suspected abuse or neglect, if we have detailed information. Often the caller won't give identifying information."

"Some calls come from kids who have run already and they need food, shelter and support. We try to help them with their immediate needs by referring them to the local runaway shelter closest to them."

"Adults also call us whose children have run, or who know about a child being abused and wants to find out what can be done to help the kid and the family."

Garden Corner

With Spring just around the corner, let's look at some questions asked of Extension specialists at Michigan State University:

Q: The apple trees in my lawn are producing very poorly. They're plenty old enough to bear. I prune them and spray them for insects and diseases and water them during dry weather. What's likely to be the problem?

A: Several possibilities come to mind. Poor pollination may be the culprit, especially if all your trees are of the same variety. Many apple trees require pollen from another variety to bear. Another possibility is that your trees may be getting too much nitrogen. If you're dosing your lawn regularly, you may be promoting a great deal of vegetative growth in your apple trees at the expense of fruit production. Lawn fertilizers that contain herbicides — so-called weed-and-feed compounds — can be very rough on fruit trees, ornamental trees and shrubs and other plants that happen to take them up. Do not use these compounds within the same zones of valuable plants.

Q: I think I have some sort of disease problem running rampant through my house plants. I've already lost a couple of them, and more are looking sick. It starts with a general wilt, as if the plants need water. Then the lower leaves turn yellow and fall off. Growth stops and eventually the stems turn to mush and the whole plant dies. I haven't moved my plants or changed the way I take care of them — what's happening?

A: If you're still watering your plants as you did in the summer, they are probably getting too much water. Plants are growing less vigorous now because of the low natural light levels, and they just don't need as much water as they did during the summer. To dry out the soil, place plants in a sunny, warm area and don't water again until the soil feels dry. If you've been watering by a schedule, abandon it and water only when the soil feels dry.

Navy Seaman Recruit Michael J. Loverich III, son of John and Sandra Unger of 28533 Greenview, Romulus, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

Veteran's Health Care guidelines are announced

The Veterans Administration announced proposed guidelines for carrying out provisions of the "Veterans Health Care, Training and Small Business Loan Act of 1981" which was signed into law last November.

The act, Public Law 97-72, authorized the Veterans Administration to provide certain health care services to any veteran of the Vietnam Era (Aug. 5, 1964 — May 7, 1975) who, while serving in Vietnam, may have been exposed to dioxin or was exposed to a toxic substance in a herbicide or defoliant used for military purposes.

The guidelines which VA will furnish to its medical facilities, on an interim basis, will be published in the "Federal Register" and public comment will be invited.

Health care services may not be provided under this law, the guidelines point out, for the care of conditions which are found to have resulted from a cause other than the specified exposures.

Health care services authorized under this provision of the law are limited to hospital and nursing home care in VA facilities, and outpatient care in VA facilities on a pre- or post-hospitalization basis or to obviate a need for hospitalization. These services will be provided without regard to the veteran's age, service connected status or the inability of the veteran to defray the expenses of such care. Veterans furnished outpatient care under this authority will be accorded priority ahead of nonservice-connected veterans and equal to former POWs receiving care for nonservice-connected conditions.

Congress made it clear that this law provides for health care only. A determination that a veteran is eligible for such care does not constitute a basis for service connection or in any way affect determinations regarding service connection.

VA guidelines provide also that a complete medical history, physical examination and appropriate diagnostic studies will be developed for each veteran who served in the Republic of Vietnam and who requests VA medical care.

For those who have been examined within the prior six months, only those procedures which are medically indicated by the current circumstances will be repeated. Where the findings reveal a condition requiring treatment, the responsible staff physician shall make a determination as to whether the condition resulted from a cause other than the specified exposure.

In making this determination, the physician will consider that the following types of conditions are not ordinarily considered to be due to such exposure:

- A. Congenital or developmental condition, e.g., spina bifida, scoliosis;
- B. Conditions which are known to have pre-existed military service;
- C. Conditions resulting from trauma, e.g., deformity or limitation of motion of an extremity;
- D. Conditions having a specific and well established etiology, e.g., tuberculosis, gout;
- E. Common conditions having a well recognized clinical course, e.g., inguinal hernia, acute appendicitis.

"On occasion," the guidelines continue, "the responsible staff physician may find that a veteran requires care for one or more of the conditions listed (above), but that the case presents complicating circumstances that make the provision of care under this authority appropriate."

"In such instances, the physician should seek guidance from the chief of staff regarding authorization for treatment."

"If treatment is so authorized, the reasons will be clearly documented in the medical record. Veterans who are not provided needed medical care under this circular may be furnished care if they are eligible under any other statutory authority."

HURON TOWNSHIP

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO REFERENDUM ON BECOMING A CHARTER TOWNSHIP

Official certification has been received from the Michigan Secretary of State indicating that the Township of Huron has a population of 5,000 or more and the township board has the right to exercise one of three options concerning status as a charter township under the provisions of Act 359, Public Acts of 1947, as amended.

1. Adopt by majority vote a resolution opposed to incorporation as a charter township.

2. Adopt by majority vote a resolution of intent to approve incorporation as a charter township.

3. Adopt by majority vote a resolution to place before the electorate at the next regular or special township election the question of incorporation as a charter township.

In the event option 2 is adopted by the township board, the citizens of the township have the right to file a "Right to Referendum Petition". This petition must be filed within the 60 days which must lapse between passage of a resolution of intent to incorporate and final passage of the resolution to incorporate as a charter township.

The petition will follow, in general form, the nominating petition form as prescribed in the Michigan Election Law, and in the heading will indicate "Disagreement of intent to incorporate as a charter township". The petition must be signed by not less than 10% of the registered voters of the township based on the vote cast for all candidates for supervisor at the last election at which a supervisor was elected.

If the petition is successful, the question of incorporation will be placed on the ballot at the next general township or special township election.

Meeting called to order by Supervisor Cullin at 8:32 a.m. Pledge of allegiance. Roll Call: Present: Cullin, Dep. Clerk Dudick, Welty, Domen, Wojie, Kureth, Toohey, Absent: Craven. Also present: Atty. James, Secretary Jensen and approximately 20 interested citizens.

AUDIENCE: No one wished to address the Board. Audience portion closed.

BUSINESS: Committee to research the appointment of Van Buren Township Police Department Commander.

Supervisor Cullin recommended to the Board that the Clerk direct a letter to the Attorney General's Office and the F.B.I. asking that an investigation be made regarding the various rumors and allegations being made by the newspapers about Police Department Commander, Richard Debs.

Motion Welty, support Wojie, to accept the recommendation of Supervisor Cullin and direct the Clerk to ask that these agencies conduct an investigation re: the rumors and allegations. Trustee Kureth called for a roll call vote. Ayes: Cullin, Dudick, Welty, Domen, Wojie, Toohey. Nays: Kureth. MOTION CARRIED.

Motion Domen, support Kureth, to suspend Commander Debs with pay, pending the outcome of the investigation.

Discussion was held regarding the motion, at which time Sgt. Bernard asked to be placed on the record as having been present when former Chief, George Montgomery, received the records check on Richard Debs and there was nothing on the record. He also stated that he supported Commander Debs one hundred percent. Other officers also spoke on behalf of the Commander. Trustee Toohey called for the question. MOTION FAILED.

Motion Toohey, support Wojie, to adjourn. MOTION CARRIED.

Meeting adjourned at 9:02 A.M.

Respectfully submitted,
Doreen Craven, Clerk

The YBA-sanctioned competition appeals to local youngsters who meet on various week-

'A salute to youth'

Leukemia victim tells of her struggle

A Detroit youngster has been selected by the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan (CLF) to receive a special award at a celebrity banquet sponsored by the NFL Alumni Association on Jan. 19.

Receiving the award in behalf of CLF is Jennifer Yarbrough, 12 who lives with her mother, Verlin Brown in Detroit. Jennifer has courageously battled Hodgkin's disease, a cancerous blood disorder which affects the lymphatic system, since 1973. After undergoing successful radiation and chemotherapy treatments at Children's Hospital in Detroit, she was removed from regular treatments in 1979.

Hodgkin's is one of 23 serious blood disorders for which CLF provides services.

Jennifer is one of four children to be honored at the NFL Alumni's Celebrity Awards Banquet held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Dearborn. Children from three other Detroit-area agencies will be honored as well.

The banquet is one of a number of NFL Alumni sponsored activities in a week-long "Salute to Youth" from Jan. 17 to Jan. 23.

During the week, programs have been scheduled to spotlight and benefit four Detroit-area agencies which provide services to children. In addition to the Leukemia Foundation, the American Diabetes Association, the Hemophilia Foundation and the Arthritis Foundation will be spotlighted.

When diagnosed, as a three-year-old, Jennifer didn't understand what Hodgkin's disease was. All she knew was that she was spending a lot of time in doctor's offices and hospitals. Then, in 1979, she attended Special Days camp for children with leukemia and other forms of cancer.

"At camp, the doctors started asking me all these questions about my disease," Jennifer recalled. "They kept saying 'cancer'. I didn't know anything. I didn't think I had cancer. I just knew I had Hodgkin's disease."

After a long talk with her mother, she finally understood that Hodgkin's was a form of cancer.

"When I first found out I had Hodgkin's disease, all I could think about was I'd never get through (with hospital trips and medication). But when I found out what it really was, I thought, 'I could have died.' I wasn't so down anymore about the treatments. It was just something I had to do."

"She was really an inspiration to me," commented Mrs. Brown. "When she was really sick a lot of the time, I was just falling apart but Jenny just said, 'Momma, go to work, I'll be alright.'"

Since the disease has been held in check for the past two years, Jennifer returns to Children's Hospital only for periodic check-ups and her life has returned to normal. An honor roll student at Nolan Middle School in Detroit, she likes to skate, enjoys dancing and "just meetin' people."

In addition to the four youth awards, O.J. Simpson and Merlin Olsen will receive career achievement awards at the

WCCC optimistic on enrollment

The Western Campus of the Wayne County Community College is expected to surpass its fall enrollment when winter registration gets underway today.

"Walk-In" registration will continue through January 13, while classes are expected to begin on schedule Mon., Jan. 18.

"As the latest addition to the master facility building plan in operation by the college to provide Wayne County residents with five regional instructional facilities, the Western Center strives very diligently to be a part of the growth that is projected for Western Wayne County," said Dr. Julius Brown, dean of the Western Campus.

School officials boast that the Western Center also has the most innovative, modern and well-staffed Child Development ment facility in Western Wayne County.

As a component of the strong child development program operated by the College in all of its regions, the center will accept children aged one year to six years. The WC3 Child Care Program is unique in that it serves the student-body as well as the community. It has one of the highest adult-child ratio in the county because, as a "lab school," it requires input from its students in Mental Health, Nursing, Human Development, Child Development, Nutrition, and other areas of human service which involve the developmental needs of young children.

"The focus in our Child Care Program is on the development of the total child" according to Arlene Altman, Director of Child Care in the College.

"When we take in a child, we are also delivering a service to an entire family," said Altman.

In addition to its roster of academic programs, the Western Campus will offer a variety of Community Service/Continuing Education programs including a Home Weatherization class where a student may learn ways to fight high winter fuel bills through various conservation methods. This program, which prepares students to evaluate their own home for heat loss, could also lead to a career in energy conservation, another rapidly-expanding vocational area.

For more information about special programs at the facility, call JoAnn Terry, Assistant Dean at 699-0200.

For tracking careers

State Police seek 'special canines'

The Michigan State Police are making a special recruiting appeal for certain qualified canines whose owners may wish to offer them as candidates for trooper tracking careers in law enforcement in the state.

This appeal by the State Police canine unit in the department's training academy in southwest Lansing is as follows:

"If you are a male purebred German shepherd or golden retriever between 8 and 15 months old, looking for an exciting life, a lot of travel and a lifetime of service to people, you may become a member of the Michigan State Police Canine Unit.

"You are issued all of your equipment needed. A vehicle (chauffeur provided), and your own family. A house is given to you (complete with janitor service) and also a lot of good food.

"If you are interested, and can qualify, you may become a member of one of the best canine units in the nation by contacting your nearest State Police post or Sgt. William F. Flower in Lansing at (517) 322-1200."

Sergeant Flower has been associated with the department's tracking program since 1973 and has been canine unit supervisor since July this year. He formerly handled tracking dogs at Pontiac and Lansing posts.

Our Opinions

Point won, Sheldon should wait till '83

In the case of unsuccessful Belleville City Council candidate, Steve Sheldon, the wheels of justice appear to move ever so slowly. Surely, he says, that if a wrong has been committed by a machine, humans should be able to correct it.

And the evidence is preponderantly in his favor.

The 27-year-old auto salesman attempted to gain a seat on Belleville's City Council during last November's General Election. He lost. However, he gathered enough courage to challenge the outcome of the election, arguing that one of the voting machines in City Hall had gone kaput.

Sheldon felt — and county election officials later verified his theory — that the voting machine had determined the final tabulation of the election and not the voters. He asked for and received help from the Wayne County Elections' Commission to inspect the machine. And the inspectors discovered that the machine, indeed, did not register any votes to his name after two votes were cast.

A very sensitive issue. Unlike the machine, Sheldon didn't cry "foul", but pursued the matter in the right manner — he hired an attorney who led the unhappy candidate through the legalistic maze.

However, despite the city's embarrassment caused by the faulty machine, Sheldon learned that sometimes wrongs can't be corrected in the name of justice.

Sheldon urged council and was refused an opportunity to set in motion a "mini-election". Council and the city argued that only a court can force them to nullify the results of the election.

With the ball back in Sheldon's court, the young candidate decided that to carry the question to the courts would take weeks and even months.

Possibly, even years.

So he decided to drop the issue. We would like to commend him for his action. Although we agree that a machine has done him wrong, we believe a long court battle wouldn't solve anything. After the legal questions are disposed of, there would still have to be an election.

We feel that if he's sincere — and we believe he is — that he wants to help the city, then he will have his opportunity in 1983 when he can run for a council seat if he chooses.

A tribute to area Goodfellows

We don't know when or where "The Goodfellows" got started, but we're sure happy they did.

These devoted citizens of the community perform miracles each Christmas and unquestionably deserve the thanks of each and all of us.

Standing on the corners of the main intersections through rain, sleet, snow and sub-zero weather, Goodfellows brave the elements selling their traditional newspaper edition to raise funds so that there will be "No Child without a Christmas".

As each head of the local Goodfellows' checked in this year to announce "that we've gone over the top despite the depressed economy", we are reminded that the struggle for economic survival sometimes can be forgotten to help those who are truly in dire need of help.

Like many things, people sometimes would like to forget the less unfortunate. But there are a very few of us who at one time or other haven't been in the ranks of the unemployed.

And, it is through organizations like the Goodfellows that we're reminded that helping people is what life is all about.

Ex-Van Buren police chief comments on 'retirement'

To My Many Friends and Supporters of Van Buren Township:

Because of recent news articles of late (Ypsi Press & Detroit News), the Van Buren Special Board Meeting called to discuss the problem that I attended on Tuesday, I feel the need to clarify my position. My name continues to enter into the subject and controversy surrounding the Van Buren Police Department.

On the information given to me by Police Commissioner Tom Welty and Commander Richard Debs, I did a pre-employment check — it revealed no criminal history. At that time, however, I was unaware that Mr. Debs could have another identity (per the Detroit News Article Sunday, 12/27/81). I now wonder if I was given all the pertinent information available at that time.

My protest (quoted in this same article) was that my hands were tied, the appointment of Mr. Debs was not the only problem. Let me explain. . . . The last Chain of Command Schedule that I received was as follows:

- 1 — Supervisor Patricia Cullin,
- 2 — Police Commissioner Tom Welty,
- 3 — Deputy Police Commander Chester Wojcie,
- 4 — Commander Richard Debs and, finally
- 5 — Chief George Montgomery.

Any move that I made had to be approved by the above, continuously being bogged down by Politicians wanting to play Police. New schedules and reorganizations issued by the above appeared frequently without having ever consulted me.

My frustrations brought me to the point of resignation, and so I confronted Commissioner Welty and Commander Debs — they told me they would not accept it, wanted me to stay, said to keep my car, remain as Chief and collect my salary. This was not a solution to any problem as I saw it.

To back up a bit, I had a bout with a virus last August, and since that time have had regularly scheduled checkups. On my regular visit to my doctor, it was his opinion that I should cut my working hours. . . . I stated that in my request for Retirement.

Commissioner Welty was well aware of the long working hours that I was putting in between the two jobs. Speaking to Neighborhood Groups who were forming Neighborhood Watches, planning the formation of the Reserves, serving on the Board of the Belleville Central Dispatch and various other meetings with groups and individual citizens as required of the Chief.

My part-time job as Chief was gradually becoming fulltime, along with my regular fulltime job.

To dispel any other rumors, these are the reasons I requested my retirement.

Van Buren recall group explains position

EDITOR — This letter is in response to a specific request made by The Associated Newspapers' for answers to certain questions raised by a letter written by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Daley of Van Buren.

Before answering those questions let me clarify a couple of items. First, I fully expect certain individuals to step forward and send the newspaper letters showing support for one or more members of the Board of Trustees or condemning myself and those working on the recall or attacking Jerry McKelvey whose courage and tenacity for seeking the truth has inspired this action. Many of these letters will be written by persons who are indebted for one reason or another or persons to whom promises of future consideration for favors have been made by someone on the board.

If the newspaper chooses to run these letters without questioning the motivation or accuracy of the data, please do so.

I believe the readers of your paper in Van Buren Township have had their eyes opened to where they are totally capable of separating truth from fiction.

Secondly, please do not expect me to respond to every insinuation or accusation made against those connected with the recall.

Again, many of these will be made intentionally by persons with vested interests and some will be made from a position of insufficient data.

In either case, our disagreement is with persons on the Board of Trustees and not with the citizens of Van Buren Township.

If there are people with legitimate disagreement with the recall, fine, they are entitled to their opinion and I will not engage in a verbal battle in the newspaper with those individuals.

No one, including myself, would reasonably expect one hundred percent support to any position they may take, and certainly there will be some who oppose the recall for one reason or another.

The recall effort requires 1,096 signatures to force an election and only a majority of the votes in the election to recall. I believe the majority of the residents in Van Buren Township will make themselves heard on this issue in favor of recalling most of the members of the Board of Trustees.

Finally, I know the newspaper is knowledgeable on many of the issues over which this recall was initiated. You have had conversations with many of the residents in our community and know the seriousness of the problems which exist. With that in mind, I sincerely hope you will use some discretion and refuse to print that which you know to be false, inaccurate, or otherwise intended to discredit or damage either this effort or the reputations of those connected with this effort.

Now, in response to the letter. They inquire as to whether the circulators intend to run for office. There are currently about 75 persons circulating petitions and more requesting petitions each day. I can truthfully say I have not asked if any of them intend to run for office if the recall is successful.

It is my understanding that should the recall succeed in removing sufficient members of the Board to render it incapable of action (less than a quorum) and therefore unable to appoint new members themselves, then the Governor would be asked to make the required appointments for an interim period of sixty (60) days at which time another election will be held to elect new officials.

I think it would be presumptuous to assume that anyone connected with the recall might be able to predict who the Governor might appoint should he be required to do so. In the subsequent election, if required, the registered voters of Van Buren Township will be asked to choose from those candidates who have emerged and qualified themselves as candidates through the process established by law.

I believe any registered voter of Van Buren Township, except those just recalled, are eligible to qualify themselves as candidates for that election.

The rest of the questions asked by Mr. and Mrs. Daley appear to have been answered by them also. Not knowing where their information is coming from, I regard their answers as their opinion and they are entitled to that without comment from me. Each registered voter is entitled to an opinion in this matter. That is the purpose and intent of the recall, to give them an opportunity to take another look at the decisions being made by those in office and to express whether or not they still have confidence in the job they are doing.

If sufficient people sign the petitions requesting the election, the election will be scheduled and at that time each registered voter will be able to voice his/her opinion.

'Roots', of sorts

By TOM MOORADIAN
Managing Editor

Newspaper people seem to have an obsession to do what "ordinary people" can't.

For example, when Sue McAllister of Westland sent this newspaper a letter asking it to help locate some lost Scottish kin, our first thought was to toss the letter in the nearest file.

But then, why not? "Roots" had a lot of intrigue, didn't it?

Although we haven't actually located the "missing persons," thanks to a reliable sleuth we have narrowed the field to three possible choices, and the next move we believe is up to Ms. McAllister.

Let me explain.

In last week's edition, Ms. McAllister's letter asked area residents to locate a "Joseph Shaw, age 63, his wife, Edith. They had emigrated to Michigan from Clydebank, Scotland in 1953 and took up residence at 8225 Colonial Lane in Dearborn Heights."

Well, our investigation showed that there are no Shaws at that location in the Heights.

However, there are a pair of Shaws in Michigan who are in the 64-years-old age group. There's a Joseph Shaw, who resides in St. Clair Shores, and a Joseph Shaw, born July 31, 1918, who resides in Hazel Park.

Now, the only Edith Shaw that our sleuths have turned up is a resident of Alger, Michigan.

But telephone calls to all three persons by our staff have been fruitless: We can't make the connection.

And, because we don't want to invade anyone's privacy — if we haven't already done so — we feel the seeker should play the "shell game," and carry on the search from here.

It appears that the Hazel Park Shaw could have a tie with the Shaw in the north country. A Joseph Shaw has been in the West Branch area where he recently received a ticket for a minor violation.

And, if anyone else out there wants us to trace their roots, let it be known here and now that playing Alex Haley, the investigator, really is no fun.

That's what our staff says. They prefer the Alex Haley role behind a typewriter.

And I really can't blame them.

Sign your letters, please

The Associated Newspapers welcomes letters from our readers, however, the editorial staff stresses that each letter must be signed and include the letterwriter's signature, address and telephone number.

Original letters that have not appeared in other community newspapers will have preference over those previously published.

Letters should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, Associated Newspapers, 35540 Michigan Ave., Wayne, Michigan.

A plea to help needy children

EDITOR—The 1981 holiday season may remind many of us that some things haven't changed. This year, once again, we feasted upon a traditional (and probably lavish) turkey dinner, watched spectacular holiday parades, gathered around the television set to watch myriad football games and fought crowds in search of the perfect gift.

Some things haven't changed in other parts of the world either. This year, as in years past, people have been forced to flee their homelands, find shelter in crowded and unsanitary refugee camps and suffer the debilitating effects of malnutrition and disease.

In the Northeast African nation of Somalia, close to a million people are living in these camps. They are alive today because international relief agencies are providing them with the food, water and medical care they need to survive.

But I am concerned about the dependency this assistance tends to create.

The 1981 holiday season should remind many of us that it is time for some things to change. It is time to put an end to widespread hunger and to dependence upon daily shipments of food.

Some voluntary agencies such as Save the Children, have taken a giant step in this direction by providing the Somali refugees with the skills and resources they need and want to provide for themselves. Instead of just handing out food, Save the Children is handing out techniques for growing food and for planting seeds, trees and small-plot family gardens.

The holiday season encourages us to share our love with family and friends. This season let's share our love, caring and concern with members of the human family by helping the Somali refugees regain self-sufficiency. Any contribution, no matter how small, can help. Please mail your check today to: Save the Children, Somalia Relief Fund, Westport, Ct. 06880, attention Valerie Harper

Ex-candidate thanks supporters

EDITOR—I know that I have stirred up a lot of controversy during the recent weeks in my persistence to see "justice done". Although the Wayne County Elections' Commission has proven me right — that the voting machine I suspected was faulty, indeed, did malfunction during the Nov. 3 General Election, depriving me of votes, I will not pursue the issue any further.

I do not feel the battle was lost; it was beneficial to anyone. However, I do feel that steps should be taken that incidents like these shouldn't happen again to any candidate who is running for a public office.

After all, when such incidents occur there is suspicion and also the voters are disenfranchised.

Again, I would like to express my sincere appreciation for all the support I received during and after the campaign. I believe the people who were elected to office will do an excellent job, and I extend to them my sincere congratulations.

I hope they will continue to work for the betterment of our community.

In the meantime, I am looking forward to "returning to the battle front" the next time around. I will run again.

And I hope that I will have your support again.

Calls recall in VB 'ridiculous'

EDITOR—If Ron Yurchak, Jerry McKelvey and their supporters are successful in their attempt to recall the Van Buren Township Board, we may as well close down the courts, eliminate the State Legislature and even throw away the Constitution.

This group has appointed themselves judge, jury and executioner for everything that happens in the township.

They can't seem to understand even the basic principle that in the United States each person is innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

If they can't understand the right of each and every citizen to a fair trial, you can hardly expect them to understand that a prospective employer cannot ask an applicant if they have ever been arrested — only if they have ever been convicted of a crime.

Another point they seem to have difficulty understanding is that the landfill is licensed and controlled by the State of Michigan, not the Van Buren Township Board.

When residents were screaming for full-time police protection after the Wayne County Sheriff's Patrol was discontinued, it was Tom Welty (Police Commissioner) who revised schedules and utilized reserves to provide 24 hour police coverage — without a millage increase.

Members of the Van Buren Board are doing many good things for the Township — let them do their jobs according to the law! Wake up fellas we live in the good old USA not Russia.

As a tax payer in Van Buren, I call this recall campaign ridiculous and the leaders of the campaign uninformed on basic human rights.

More questions on recall

EDITOR—As residents of Van Buren Township we have some questions to ask the circulators of the recall petitions to remove all the elected Township officials.

- Would a recall of the officials change control of the landfill? (NO. Control is under the State of Michigan and the Wayne County Health Department).

- Would a recall of the officials remove appointees? (NO only the elected officials).

- What will the cost be to the taxpayers of Van Buren Township to hold a recall election? ($4,000 to $6,000 at a time when taxes are needed for important Township business).

- Have the circulators of the recall petitions candidates in mind to fill the positions if and this is a BIG IF the elected officials are recalled?

- We request an immediate answer to question number 4 and if any of the circulators are considering running for office, in our opinion, this would be the dirtiest coup of the decade.

- If the recall is effective would any of the circulators feel that an appointment by Governor Milliken to fill the positions as interim officials until a successor shall be duly elected, give them incumbent stature? (YES, But with a tarnished profile).

- We feel that a recall can only split the community. The reasonable political expertise would be to wait until the terms of the elected officials expire and then field qualified candidates who will run clean and honest campaigns.

- We only hope that the residents of Van Buren Township will read this letter and think about the ramifications of a recall election.

Letterwriter was in error

EDITOR—Mrs. LaVan's letter in your Dec. 22 issue was a real shocker to a multitude of Welland's senior citizens. Her paucity of fact and preponderance of venom was unbelievable.

The entire gist of the letter was an unwarranted, unfounded vicious attack on individuals who have done their best to improve the lot of Westland's seniors.

The Deputy Director of the Department on Aging is a well known, long time, dedicated worker on behalf of the aged. Her character, reputation and behavior are beyond reproach. I defy the writer of that letter to name facts rather than spew forth unbridled emotions.

I am completely flabbergasted at the attitude displayed by the writer.

'A new beginning'

EDITOR—"A New Beginning"—What beautiful words. They seem to ring with hope and anticipation. It would be wonderful if we never made a mistake, but each one of us, if honest, will have to admit it hasn't worked out that way.

However, just as each sunrise brings forth a new day, God wants you and I to be enriched with new life even if it has been messed up in the past.

There is still hope. Let's take a look at the Apostle Peter in the Bible.

About 10 days after Jesus has ascended into heaven he is standing just outside the "upper room" with about 120 Christians, including the Mother of Jesus. They had all just been filled with God's Holy Spirit. Thousands had gathered before them after this outstanding phenomenon had taken place. Peter boldly steps forth and preaches that famous sermon under a fresh anointing. The multitude is convinced of reality and 3000 respond. Peter is elected!

But, many forget that a few weeks earlier he was a miserable failure. He had almost committed murder, severing a man's ear from his head with a single blow of the sword.

Then, at Jesus' trial, he denies he ever knew him, deserts him and runs away.

But, outside, he weeps bitterly in repentance and Jesus gives him a second chance.

And, now he has just had the privilege of introducing 3000 more to a new beginning! This was just the beginning for Peter, also.

Millions today would give almost anything to be able to recall certain instances of their lives. There is a God who actually delights in giving us a second chance—a new beginning. It's called grace and mercy. All he asks is an apology. He's more than ready to not only forgive but to completely forget. A genuine born-again experience through sincere repentance makes us "a new creature—old things have passed away: Behold, all things are become new!" (2 Corinthians 5:17).

UF goes over top in area

EDITOR—May I take this opportunity to thank you, the residents of Inkster and the surrounding community, for your support in the recent United Foundation fund drive. As the accompanying letter will indicate, our citizens did more than their share in aiding this worthy organization.

I would like to add my personal expressions of thanks to all committee members who assisted in serving this cause, a cause that benefits all of us. Additionally, I would like to thank all contributors as well.

ED BIVENS, JR.
Inkster

I want to extend to you Mr. Bivens, the heartfelt thanks of myself and the entire United Foundation staff for your efforts on behalf of the 1981 Torch Drive.

The West Unit, of which your community is a part, secured the largest increase in small business giving in the tri-county area.

Your efforts in recruiting and organizing volunteers, managing the campaign process, and obtaining significant local media coverage, made this success possible.

As a group, the volunteers in the West Unit have raised $122,598 to date, with some areas still finishing contacts and turn-ins. This represents $23,000 of totally new contributions, as well as the $99,000 of contributions which we carried into the campaign.

Congratulations on a job well done. Because of your efforts, thousands of people will receive needed services that might otherwise have been unavailable.

January

*'Tis winter time make no mistake,
The ground is covered white.
The soft and fluffy snow we see Sparkles in the light.*

*A grayish cloudy dawn we greet
Is heavy laden there,
To shower crystal diamonds
In the trees so dark and bare.*

*'Tis a lonely time of season
When the cold bars up our doors.
The frost upon the window pane
Sends chills throughout our pores.*

*Flames within the fire place
Sends warmth in all direction.
Children at their games and play
Aware of home's affection.
When at times they're out to play,
In sleds on ice they slide.
Their mittened hands get cold and blue
And soon they're back inside.*

*What matters then if boys and girls
With smiling faces merry,
Though frosty winds blow hard and long
Through the month of January.*

Reflections

All about patience

The other evening I was sitting in front of the fire reading one of those articles that non-parents have a habit of writing. This one was all about patience.

"The important thing about raising children," the author wrote, "is the way you feel about the child underneath. The patience you show him in your daily contacts, and the need to teach him, by your example, how to be patient when confronting frustration."

Naturally, I could agree with him now that my kids are grown up, but how it was when they were growing up is something I would just as soon forget.

But memory, once jogged, has a way of thrusting things before you. And this was one of those times.

It was during the time that we were a large family with one bathroom. If there is one thing that will teach a family patience it's being a big family with one bathroom.

I had spent a lot of time one day making peanut butter sandwiches and dragging chameleons out of the refrigerator. There they all were, my kids, that is, swinging from the cupboard doors, hollering because I wasn't getting the sandwiches made fast enough, and screeching when I set the chameleon loose, and finally I had slapped a knife full of peanut butter across the biggest mouth in the room and then sat down and bawled.

"What are you bawling about?" my littlest kid asked.

"Because I lost my patience," I told her, and because kids are kids they all sat down and started to bawl with me.

And then we made a pact. We would never lose patience with one another. We would always remember the rights of others. We would be kind and considerate. Well . . . you know how mothers and kids are.

It lasted for almost fifteen minutes. Suddenly through the house came the sound of a door being kicked in, and between the kicks, loud, furious tongues wagging and clacking against teeth.

Running to the foot of the stairs I shouted patiently enough "What do you think you're doing, you dummies, kicking the house in?"

"He won't let me in the bathroom," one of my little kids sobbed. "And I've got to go . . ." and he emphasized his need by banging away at the battered door.

Remembering I was the mother, the teacher, the patient one, I repulsed the need to bang a couple of heads together and said calmly and sweetly.

"Have patience, honey . . ." "I have had patience," my little one sobbed. "I am patient . . ." And he gave the door another violent kick.

"That doesn't look like patience to me," I said, still trying to be reasonable.

"If I wasn't patient, then how come I haven't wet my pants?" And he gave the door another kick.

You couldn't ask for more patience than that, could you?

famous axiom of choice.)

Now, while I can say for sure that I will never have occasion to use either "Aaron's Beard" or "Zorn's Lemma" in the course of general conversation, I may be able to use, say, "Saint Swithin's Day". (St. Swithin's day if it does rain, for forty days it will remain; St. Swithin's day if it be fair, for forty days 'twill rain no more.") I may even be able to devote a whole column, when things get slow, to why we have to worry about forty days of rain or shine on St. Swithin's day (July 15).

If you can't wait that long for the answer, simply send a self-addressed stamped envelope in care of this newspaper with the words "St. Swithin's" on the back flap. I'll get to you as quick as I can.

If you can't wait that long, it's probably in your local encyclopedia. But before I forget, did you know that there's a bakery in Yreka, California called the Yreka Bakery? It's the only bakery in the world whose name can be read backwards and forwards and says the same thing.

Mark Twain had a great story about how Yreka got its name, but I don't have room to tell it here. I couldn't tell it as well as Mark Twain anyway, so maybe you had better look that up too.

By the way, if there's anything else of unimportance you might like to know, our lending library is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from . . .

Mona Grigg

. . . And that's the truth

The hamburger really wasn't invented in Germany, but was purely an American invention. It was the bun, not the meat that made it a "Hamburger". The euphemism, "Salisbury steak", came about as a patriotic gesture during World War I. It replaced the German-sounding "hamburger" about the same time as "Sauerkraut" became known as "liberty cabbage."

"Chaise longue" is a corruption of the French, "Chaise longue", which means "long chair" — but so many people say "lounge" that before long "lounge" may become the corruption.

General Douglas MacArthur didn't originate the phrase, "Old soldiers never die, they just fade away" — nor did he pretend to. What he said in his famous farewell speech was, "I still remember the refrain of one of the most popular barracks ballads of that day (World War I), which proclaimed most proudly that old soldiers never die; they just fade away. I now close my military career and just fade away."

"Olympiad" isn't another word for "olympic games", but refers instead to the four years between the games. It was used as a measurement of time in ancient Greece.

I guess if you wanted to get technical about it, all of the above would be considered "trivia".

But before you remind me, I'll remind you that in an earlier column I resolved not to buy any more books on trivia to put in anybody's stocking at Christmas.

Well, I kept my promise. Nowhere in the book the above excerpts are from (Tom Burnam's sequel to "The Dictionary of Misinformation" called "More Misinformation") called the word "trivia" mentioned — and I didn't buy it for one of the kids, I bought it for myself.

I've finally figured out that the reason my kids got so many books on trivia each year was because the giver of the books had a penchant for trivialities. It would have been much simpler — and far less painful all around — if I had simply asked for the books myself.

In our house we have books called "Trivia", "Triviata", "More Trivia" and "Son of Trivia". We have all of the "People's Almanacs" the Wallechinsky family ever put out, including their "Book of Lists" and their "Book of Predictions".

(Here's a little trivia for you: Irving Wallace's real family name is Wallechinsky, which explains why the "Almanacs", etc., are written by both "Wallaces" and "Wallechinskys". Irving's son David chose to stick with the original family name.)

I have another trivia book called, "Whose What?" It says its a "reference book for all the strange expressions that have entered the American language — from Aaron's Beard (A perennial herb of the saxifrage family said to be a good remedy for hemorrhoids) to Zorn's Lemma (one of a family of principles widely used in mathematical proofs and first proposed in 1935 by Max Zorn as a convenient alternative to the

Vet wishes to stop direct deposit

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.)

Q—My VA benefits check goes by direct deposit to my bank and I wish to terminate the direct deposit. What should I do?

A—To cancel a direct deposit, you need only to notify the VA in writing of a new address for your VA check. One precaution - do not close the account to which the direct deposit was going until you receive the first VA check at your new address. This will prevent any interruption in receipt of benefits.

Q—If I do not agree with a decision the VA makes on an application for benefits, what can I do?

A—You may file an appeal on benefit decisions you disagree with. All that is necessary to start the appeal procedure is for you to write the VA stating why you disagree with the decision and include information you believe should be considered by the VA.

Q—Can a veteran purchase a condominium or townhouse with a GI home loan?

A—Yes, as long as it meets VA appraisal requirements and is going to be occupied by the borrower as his/her permanent primary residence.

Q—If a veteran dies before a home loan guaranteed by the Veterans Administration is repaid, will the VA pay off the balance?

A—No, the surviving spouse or other co-borrower must continue making payments.

'Christmas gift'

It was one of those Christmas Gifts that really came as a welcomed surprise, and even stunned members of the "September Days". It was a check that caused Director Virginia Melcher (above) to break into a smile as she accepted $300 on behalf of the senior citizens from the Belleville Area Lions' Club. The money will be used for the purchase of a school bus. The seniors are attempting to raise the necessary $2,500 to buy the vehicle. Further donations can be made to the September Club by contacting Mrs. Melcher at 699-7474.

Chamber hosts 'Up with People' gala stagershow

The Greater Chamber of Commerce will bring up the curtains for 1982 with a "Super Show." And the show, with an internationally acclaimed musical ensemble, is "Up With People" which is on the program of the regular Romulus Chamber of Commerce meeting-luncheon scheduled to begin at noon, Tues., Jan. 12.

The gala program will be staged at the Airport Hilton Ballroom and there's good reasons for that—the special program will feature 50 young people from around the world who are part of the troupe.

This is one of the five teams who are performing in Southeastern Michigan during the two weeks prior to Super Bowl XVI, where the entire group of 450 will perform during half-time.

This group was obtained by the efforts of Detroit Diesel Allison.

Up With People is an independent non-profit educational and cultural group which uses entertainment to build a bridge of communication and understanding among peoples, cultures and countries.

At the same time it seeks to provide its members with a learning experience that will broaden their skills and enable them to make a positive contribution to the communities and countries they visit.

Up With People is truly multi-national. Detroit's contingent will consist of some 450 young adults between the ages of 17 and 25 who represent nearly every state—five are Michigan natives— and 24 foreign nations.

The hour long program they will present to Chamber members, guests and community members of all ages is a family oriented musical production featuring original compositions, a medley of hit tunes and a collection of folk songs and dances from around the world.

Since its founding in 1966, Up With People has visited 2,500 cities in 47 nations on six continents. Their live performances have been seen by some 40 million people, and they have also appeared on national television in 37 countries.

In addition to two previous Super Bowl performances, they have entertained at the White House and the Olympics, been received by 30 different heads of state, and recently completed a successful tour of the Peoples Republic of China.

Cast members do not live in hotels and motels on their tours—they stay with host families for an exchange of cultural and personal values and individual beliefs.

The late DeWitt Wallace, founder of the Readers Digest, was so impressed when he saw a performance 15 years ago that he immediately gave them editorial and financial support and in 1979 he pledged $2 million from his foundation to establish an endowment.

Joyce Palmer, Chamber president, wishes to emphasize that this program is open to the public and, along with all Chamber members, is urging all interested people to attend.

They are confident that you will find this a most enjoyable experience as well as the opportunity to meet and have lunch with your local business, civic and industrial leaders.

For reservations, please call the Chamber office before 5 p.m. Fri., Jan. 5, at 941-5710.

'Sharky's Machine'
unveils Burt as director

"Sharky's Machine," from Warner Bros. Pictures. Directed by Burt Reynolds. Produced by Hank Moonjean. Starring Burt Reynolds and Rachel Ward. Rated "R." ***

By STEVE WALZ
Special to Playtime

There is a prevailing trend amongst Hollywood's big name actors these days to assert themselves behind the cameras as well as in front of them.

Warren Beatty's "Reds" has met with almost universal acclaim, not so much for his acting, but for his work in putting the picture together.

Burt Reynolds is another actor who is beginning to spend more and more of his time directing movies. His latest effort, "Sharky's Machine," is one of those patented Reynolds' action-thrillers which catapulted the ruggedly handsome actor to stardom a decade ago. Reynolds headlines as Detective Sharky, a no-nonsense cop who seems to have been cut from the same mold as Clint Eastwood's "Dirty Harry" character.

The film opens with Sharky pinning down Atlanta's drug kingpin on a crowded thoroughfare, but is forced to blow him away at a high cost. Thus the police department kicks him downstairs to the vice squad.

But that doesn't stop Sharky and his "machine"—which consists of his off-beat fellow detectives, Arch (Bernie Casey) and Nosh (Richard Libertini).

Sure enough, Sharky finds himself hot on the trail of a drug crazed hitman, who is linked to the deaths of Atlanta's high class call girls.

There is also a political connection. It seems that Governor-elect Hotchkiss (Earl Holliman) has been spending time with Dominoe (Rachel Ward), a $1,000 lady of the night whom Sharky feels is the key to the whole case. Sharky eavesdrops on the lass and slowly begins to fall in love with her. But Sharky himself is in hot water.

Somebody in the department is working for the bad guys, jeopardizing Sharky, his "machine," and Dominoe. So as is the case in this film genre, we get a fast-paced graphically violent showdown.

"Sharky's Machine" is a good film which shows off Burt's burgeoning talents as a director. We also get a glimpse at Burt's soft-side again, which seems particularly endearing in this type of offering, considering the carnage around him.

Rachel Ward makes a nice debut as the sultry Dominoe. Rachel seems to possess the essential qualities that made Lesley Anne Down and Jane Seymour (two of her British colleagues) popular on both sides of the Atlantic.

Several familiar faces are back at it on the screen as Burt Reynolds (above) scores with Sharky's Machine while Jane Fonda and Kris Kristofferson bomb in the financial flop, Rollover.

"Rollover," from Warner Bros. Directed by Alan J. Pakula. Screenplay by David Shaber. Starring Kris Kristofferson, Jane Fonda and Hugh Cronyn. Rated "R." ***

By J. T. YURKO
Special to Playtime

To tell you the truth, I couldn't explain the difference between a Euro-petro dollar and your basic all-American dollar.

I didn't even know there was a difference.

As for the workings on the floor of the stock exchange, they seem to me a frenetic jumble of a curious type of exorable animal dressed in three-piece pin stripes. And I thought "rollover" was something you did in bed several times a night.

For those of you in the same position as myself, a "rollover" is a re-investing of money at the time of maturity. "Rollover" is also the name of the new film about the international world of banking and finance starring Jane Fonda and Kris Kristofferson.

If you are not a financial wizard going into the film, rest assured you won't be one going out, and if you're just looking for a good film, this particular rollover pays few dividends.

This is one of those international conspiracy thrillers that starts off friendly enough and then builds to a paranoia of epic proportions. If I told you exactly what the conspiracy was, it would give away the hinge on which the tension rests, and which the first hour and a half of the film spends in trying to make you nervous.

By the time the final criminal conspiracy is unraveled, it's not only a bit too economically esoteric, but something of an anti-climax.

There is, of course, your much more basic kind of villain, the knife-wielding, black-leather-gloved murderer, but even his tension is short-lived. Then, after all the intricacies of the plot have finally been revealed, the ending of the film is a strange kind of sci-fi-nancial doomsday that somehow doesn't follow the tone of all that precedes it, and whose only message is "Beware of Arabs who buy gold."

This kind of film is what Jane Fonda does best, and could easily have been called "The Arab Syndrome." She plays her part well, but the script simply doesn't have the structure and immediate appeal.

Director Alan J. Pakula does the best with what little he has (including some elegant circular camera movements), but Kristofferson comes off the worst.

He is a banker who plays it all as though someone starched his Brooks Brothers Suit.

What's That Sound?

By STEVE O'LEARY

Local New Rock bands impress

RETRO / TRAINABLE
"Double Take"
(Transcity)

Two of Detroit's finest New Rock bands, Retro and Trainable, have put out one of the best local releases in... well, maybe ever. Each band gets one side, and both are equally impressive over the space of the three songs they're represented by.

First up is Retro (whose single was reviewed here some months ago), with "My Heaven," which I think is one of the best cuts here. Good lyrics, a sturdy, expressive rhythm section, and particularly great guitar playing make this one a winner from the first beat.

"Motivation Travel" seems ideally suited for radio airplay, as it has a distinct commercial sound to it, even while sticking to aesthetic principles (no easy feat, that). The last cut on side one is "Beat My Heart," and while it's a good song and all, the thing that stands out is the production effects that takes Martin Bandyke's drumming out of the studio and puts it right next to you, in such a weird sort of way that at first I thought the record was scratched!

Trainable, which also has a real good single available at better record stores everywhere, also fares well on their second recording venture. Like Retro, Trainable also takes their cue from the Joy Division school of rock.

"Urban Life," the first cut, is a minor epic of sorts-kind-of like Bruce Springsteen with brain damage. John Erskine's vocals are top notch, and are complimented by Mark Duffy's nifty guitar effects.

"Postcards Condensed (The Terrorist Falls In Love)" is just plain weird (which isn't to say bad. Just weird). What follows is my favorite cut here, "I Hate Science."

Since it's also the most "traditional" rock song here stylewise—it's guitar dominated—I guess that says something about my taste... Not that you'll mistake it for Styx/Kansas/Journey (thank god!), but it wouldn't offend anyone who likes cra— ah, bands like those.

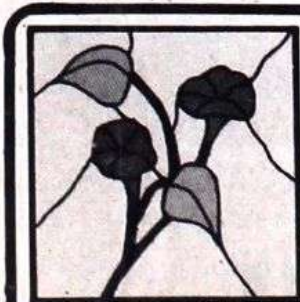

So c'mon, support your local bands! Or at least the ones as good as these two are.

Sentimental comedy opens

"Ah, Wilderness!," Eugene O'Neill's sentimental comedy, opens the new year at the Hilberry Theatre on January 6 at 8:30 p.m.

For your recipe file

Arroz con Pollo — ole!

Midwinter doldrums, busy schedules and tight budgets challenge the most ingenious homemakers; so recipes that combine hearty eating, good taste and ease of preparation are welcome.

Arroz con Pollo is a streamlined version of a classic Spanish favorite that brings magic to family meals. Prepared with cupboard ingredients, it captures the exotic flavor or the original with minimal preparation time and effort.

Chicken pieces are coated with seasoned coating mix for chicken—barbecue style, and baked in the oven. The result—tender chicken pieces that are basted by the built-in sauce flavors. While the chicken's baking, prepare the flavorful rice, peas and mushrooms, quickly and easily with the aid of packaged enriched pre-cooked rice.

Arroz con Pollo

2-½ pounds cut-up chicken
1 envelope Shake 'n Bake seasoned coating mix for chicken—barbecue style

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-½ cups Minute rice
½ cup chopped onion
1 small clove garlic, crushed (optional)
1-½ cups water
1 package (10 oz.) Birds Eye 5 minute sweet green peas, thawed
1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 chicken bouillon cubes
Pinch of ground bay leaves (optional)

Coat chicken with seasoned coating mix as directed on package. Place in 13x9-inch pan. Sprinkle evenly with any remaining mix. Bake at 350° for 50 minutes, or until chicken is tender.

Meanwhile, melt butter in skillet or saucepan. Add rice, onion and garlic and saute until rice is lightly browned. Add remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat; cover and let stand 5 minutes. Serve with the chicken. Makes 5 cups rice mixture plus chicken or 4 servings.

'News on our grads' to be new Suburban Living feature

As a new feature of the Suburban Living section for 1982, we would like to include news of our graduates — those who've since left their classes at Belleville, Romulus, Huron or Lincoln High Schools.

What are our alumni doing these days? Did they go on to college or specialty schools? Have they advanced to interesting careers? Are they involved with unusual hobbies or avocations? Do they have their own businesses? Are they working parttime, outside or from their homes?

Perhaps they've written a story, song, poem or feature article that has been published. Or maybe they've had an unusual experience meeting interesting or famous people, have won a prize or competition or received a promotion.

If readers will send us the particulars (who, what, when, where, why) and a telephone number for reference (we might have some further questions) we'd be happy to write a story on your son, daughter, husband, wife, sweetheart, friend.

Let us hear from you. "News on our Grads" will be included weekly if possible. Your cooperation in seeing that we receive the information will make this new column possible.

Direct your letters to Lee Smith, Suburban Living Editor, Box 278, Belleville, 48111.

Jeff Smith earns degree

Jeffrey Mark Smith, a 1977 alumnus of Belleville High School, graduated Dec. 5 from Michigan State University where he earned a degree in social science, his major being criminal justice.

He is the son of J. C. and Dorothy Richards of 124 N. Biggs St., Belleville, who attended the early December commencement exercises at the MSU Auditorium.

Others attending included Maureen Pulk and sons, Marc and Mike, of Ypsilanti; Fred and Georgeen Kirk and daughter, Kelly, of Westland; and Benny Bills of Chelsea.

Newcomers on the scene

Lindsay Ryan Clark

The birth of a baby girl, their first child, is being announced by Bruce R. and Debra A. Clark of 8157 Kirkridge Dr., Belleville.

Making her debut at St. Joseph Mercy

Hospital in Ann Arbor at 1:42 p.m. Dec. 2, the infant weighed 7 lbs. - ½ oz.

Titled "Lindsay Ryan", she is the new granddaughter of Shirley Tackett of New Boston and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark of Wayne. Great-grandmother honors go to Mrs. Julia Delisle of Taylor.

Jennifer Eileen Nieman

Jessica Lorene Nieman

There's a twin bill playing this post-holiday season at the Taylor home of Brent and Sharon Nieman who, on Dec. 15, welcomed a set of baby girls.

Arriving 10 minutes apart at Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, Jennifer Eileen weighed 7 lbs. - 14 ozs. and measured 20 inches as she put in her appearance at 2:49 a.m. and Jessica Lorene, debuting at 2:59 a.m., weighed 7 lbs. - 3 ozs. and measured 20½ inches.

On hand to welcome her mom and new sisters home was Beth Patrice Nieman, who's three years old.

The children's grandparents, all from Romulus, are William and Sally Nieman and Clyde and Lula Green. The proud great-grandmothers are Mrs. Cora Turcotte of Romulus and Mrs. Bessie Pittman of Knoxville, Tenn.

The girls' mother is the former Sharon Green.

Ada Sager entertains at Past Matrons lunch

The December meeting and annual Christmas party of the Past Matrons' Association of Belleville Chapter No. 73, O.E.S., found 16 members present for the 12:30 luncheon at the West Columbia Avenue home of the hostess, Ada Sager, which was festive with all the holiday decorations.

A short business meeting was conducted by the president, Roberta Pond, who presented each member with a card and Christmas handkerchief. Devotions were given by Eva Luper in the absence of the Chaplain, Mae Fielder. "Get well" cards were signed to be sent to Ida Klages, Irene Heininger and Mae Fielder who were reported ill.

Tree festivities and a social time were later enjoyed and the hostess gave each a card and small gift.

The January hostess will be announced later.

Quotes worth quoting...

"Most people have some sort of religion — at least they know what church they're staying away from."

John Erskine said it.

potpourri By Lee Smith Suburban Living Editor

This bit of miscellanea I write each week (titled "potpourri" because it means just that — a miscellaneous collection; a medley) gives me the opportunity to expound on just about any subject. But, I'll be the first to admit that it was never intended to include advice to the lovelorn, the harried, the befuddled, the woebegone. That sort of psychological matter will be left to the Joyce Brotherses, the Abigail Van Burens, the Ann Landerses, the Masters-and-Johnson duos.

BUT — when a letter full of disillusion and frustration comes across this desk with the request, "Please, Mrs. Smith, perhaps YOU can get across to parents what so many of us babysitters can't seem to do ourselves," the least I can do is let "it" speak for itself.

It seems this particular young lady has been having a hard time of it on the sitter-scene and here are her admonitions, in her own words:

"Please tell people hiring babysitters that we know times are tough but we have expenses, too, and a dollar sure doesn't buy much of anything anymore. If people can spend money to go out, they should be able to pay their sitter a decent hourly rate.

And, a real gripe of mine is when they say (without batting an eye) "We'll pay you next time" and just let it go at that! It's not fair and it's amazing how they can "forget" they owe you. Some of them simply never call you again.

If I'm asked to sit with their children, that's what it should be — THEIRS — not a couple of their friends' kids, too. This happened a couple of times and I never even was asked ahead of time if I would do it. And then, I never got one cent extra for those extra kids either. I feel they should check with me first and, if I say it's all right, then they should also pay me at least half again as much for the other kids.

I don't like "maid service" to be expected either. I've washed up a few dishes that were left in the sink, I don't mind that at all. But when someone leaves a sinkful and says, "Would you mind doing up a few dishes," I don't like that at all! I do pick up and straighten up the rooms after the children are in bed but I'm NOT there to clean house!

It also makes me mad (and I get worried, too) when people don't come home when they SAY they'll be home. If there's a reason they're going to be late, why don't they call. I don't sit on school nights anymore because this happened too many times and I, too, need my sleep.

I guess the worst thing that ever happened, though, was when it was time for me to be taken home one night, the parents came home pretty "high" and wanted to drive me home. That was the one time (my mother says) that I used my head. I wouldn't let either one drive me and called my dad instead. I guess I don't have to tell you I was never allowed to sit for that family again.

This might sound like a minor complaint to some people but it's about time we babysitters spoke up. There's no sense writing to Dear Abbey since a lot of people don't get that paper. But since most of these people live in — (edited, but let's say "in this area"), I hope they'll see this in the local paper and realize how we sitters feel about them.

I sure hope you'll be able to print this and I thank you for listening. P.S. I really like "potpourri."

Well — mamas and daddies of the world, those of you with youngsters still needing babysitters — there it is! She has a point, (or two or three) doesn't she? And if you've a good sitter and don't want to lose her (or him), take heed!

IF YOUR FAMILY is big on vegetables (as we are in the Smith fold), you're probably always looking for new and better ways to serve those green and yellow goodies. Spices and herbs are two easy ways of doctoring up dishes without going through a lot of trouble. They're also super helpers for meat, fish, cheese and seafood fixin's.

And, in keeping with the story on Indoor Herb Gardens (which you'll find elsewhere in the Suburban Living Section), we're including a "glossary" of uses for the herbs you'll be growing throughout the winter.

This is one of those bits you might want to clip and tuck away for future reference. Pasting it to the inside cover of a favorite cookbook would be the ideal place to find it whenever you're ready to "dress up" a basic green bean, carrot, cabbage, asparagus, whatever.

When cooking with your homegrown fresh herbs, use two to three times as much as you would with dried herbs. Basil, known as the "tomato herb" because it tastes so good in tomato dishes, is used in all types of Italian recipes. It also goes well with seafood, fish, lamb, cheese, eggs, peas, potatoes and tossed green salad.

Parsley is used to season a wide range of foods: meat, poultry, fish, cheese dishes, most vegetables, eggs and soups. Chervil tastes good with egg and cheese dishes, chicken, peas, cream soups and tossed salads and is used frequently to season butter sauces, especially those for fish. For variety, add chervil to cottage cheese, omelets and scrambled eggs.

Chives add flavor to omelets, salads, soups and sauces; in butter, they give a light pungency to fish without overpowering its flavor. Finely chopped chives can be mixed with cottage cheese and cream cheese and, in sour cream, they make a special topping for potatoes or a nice dip for chips or pretzels.

Rosemary, traditionally associated with meat dishes (especially lamb), can be used successfully in cheese sauces, cream sauces for seafood, poultry stuffing, potatoes and cauliflower.

An excellent blend for seasoning many foods is created by mixing the appropriate herb with butter. Simply melt or whip the butter and herb together. Begin with ¼ teaspoon herb for every ¼ cup (or half stick) butter. Add more seasoning as your taste determines.

Now for a little experimenting. . . .

A BIT MORE ABOUT THE AVERAGE AMERICAN

- The average person has about 27 trillion fat cells. But an obese person has at least three times that many.
- One of every 33 workers in America works for the federal government and one of every seven works for a state or local government.

Try an indoor herb garden for fingertip seasonings

Fresh herbs, once found only in gourmet foods, now are adding their unique flavors to more ordinary fare, thanks to the growing interest in growing your own. And herb gardens, once found only outdoors in the summer, have found their way onto windowsills everywhere, providing a unique decorative touch as well as fresh seasonings.

If you can keep a spider plant alive, you can grow a windowsill herb garden. Many of the herbs that grow well indoors, for example, basil, parsley and chives, can be started easily from seeds. Herb seeds are available at farm and garden stores, some nurseries and through seed catalogues. With other herbs, such as rosemary and sage, it's best to start with small plants which can be purchased at special herb nurseries and some greenhouses.

Most herbs can be grown successfully in regular sterilized potting soil, but suggestions for extra soil ingredients are given with the cultivation instructions. No drainage material, such as gravel, is needed. Plastic pots with drainage holes and saucers are preferable to clay pots because they are lighter, hold moisture better and don't leave water rings on your shelves or windowsill. Most herb plants need to have their soil kept moist.

They also need sunlight, so select a window where they will get plenty. You can place the pots on the sill, plant stands and shelves. Hanging them from the ceiling or window frame creates a natural curtain. Glass shelves across the window, supported by inexpensive brackets, give more room for your herbs while allowing light to enter. Just make sure that in winter the plants aren't exposed to a chill by sitting too close to the pane.

When your plants are mature, harvest the fresh herbs by cutting off short pieces of several branches instead of one entire branch. This helps maintain the plant's attractive shape.

BASIL SEED SPROUT IN FIVE DAYS

Basil is one of the easiest herbs to grow. The variety called Dwarf or French Basil, Ocimum basilicum minimum, has the best flavor. To start basil from seeds, fill two-inch pots halfway with soil, and place three seeds on the surface in each pot. Cover with one-fourth inch soil, pressed firmly, or with a thin layer of milled sphagnum moss to prevent drying. Place the pots in bright, reflected sunlight, in an area where the temperature is above 70 degrees F. at all times during the five days it takes the seeds to germinate. Be sure to keep the soil moist.

When the seedlings have four leaves, transplant them together to larger pots, supporting their spindly stems with soil up to the first pair of leaves. Place them in partial sunlight, and keep them warm -- above 60 degrees F. When they have six leaves, pinch off the top two. When the two resulting branches have four leaves, pinch off the top two of each branch. Continuing to remove the top leaves in this manner will produce a full, well-shaped plant. When the small plants become crowded, transplant the healthiest to their own pots.

Basil plants grow best in partial sunlight; for best flavor, do not fertilize. When they are a foot tall, you may begin harvesting. Pick basil from the top so it doesn't go to seed.

PARSLEY AND CHERVIL

Parsley and chervil, a member of the parsley family, are cultivated in the same manner. Before starting parsley and chervil seeds, soak them for 24 hours in lukewarm water to help germination. Fill a large pot, at least six inches in diameter and six inches deep, with sterilized soil, or for best growth, a mixture containing equal parts soil, peat moss and perlite. Place no more than eight seeds on the soil's surface, at least an inch from the rim and each other. Cover with one-eighth inch soil, pressed lightly, or one-fourth inch sand or milled sphagnum moss.

Place in bright, reflected sunlight in a warm (70 degrees F. or more) place. Keep soil moist by filling the pot's saucer with water. The seeds will germinate within two to four weeks. As the seedlings grow, support their thin stems with additional soil.

Leave all the plants in the same pot, as transplanting could damage their roots. Parsley and chervil need some direct sunlight every day and should be watered when their soil has dried out halfway down the pot. You may harvest three months after they sprout. For peak flavor, start new plants every six months.

HARVESTED CHIVES GROW BACK QUICKLY

Chives grown from seeds taste better than any you can buy at the grocery store. Start the seeds in moist soil, sand, vermiculite or milled sphagnum moss in two-inch pots. Cover them with one-fourth inch of the growing medium, keep them moist and warm, and place in partial sunlight. The plants will emerge in 10 to 21 days. When they are two inches tall, transplant the healthiest six to a four-inch pot filled with soil mixed with a little sand or vermiculite.

Within three to six months you'll be able to harvest them. Simply cut the tops to within three inches of the soil. They will grow back quickly, and with proper care, the plants will live for several years.

Sage is best grown from nursery plants. The smaller varieties look most attractive in the house. Due to spindly stems, sage often will trail, making it a good plant for a hanging basket. Plant in a mixture of two parts soil, one part peat moss and one-half part perlite. Sage grows best in partial sunlight.

Rosemary, with its curved, needle-like leaves and piney aroma, will live indoors for years. Select rosemary plants at a nursery by tasting the leaves, which should be mild in flavor. Transplant to soil containing some vermiculite. Keep rosemary moist at all times or it will die.

New high interest, tax-sheltered retirement savings for everyone!

Starting January 1st, and effective for the 1982 tax year, new changes in Individual Retirement Accounts will make an IRA one of the most rewarding tax-deferred savings plans available. Look how you can save tax dollars every year with your own personal retirement plan at WSB.

IRA means a tax shelter for all wage earners

Now all salaried employees, hourly workers, self-employed and non-working spouses can set up a long-term tax shelter with IRA, starting on January 4th, the first business day of 1982. Even if you already have a company pension or Keogh plan, you are still eligible for IRA.

IRA means higher, tax-deferred contributions

The new rules allow single workers to shelter up to $2,000 from income taxes every year. Maximum contributions increase to $2,250 for you and a non-working spouse and up to $4,000 when you and your spouse both work.

IRA means a triple tax break

First, your IRA contribution is subtracted from your current taxable income which can lower your tax bracket. Second, your IRA earns tax-free interest until withdrawal at retirement. And third, your IRA income after retirement will probably be taxed at a lower rate because you'll be in a lower tax bracket and claim more exemptions.

IRA means a more rewarding retirement
Your IRA nest egg will help supplement your Social Security and other pension benefits, ensuring a more comfortable and independent retirement. (See chart below.)

IRA at WSB means high interest and security

Your IRA will earn high interest with the new WSB money-market-related flexible rate, which will enable you to keep pace during these inflationary times. For example, if this new program would have been available in 1981, you would have earned 14.07% annual interest on your IRA. In addition to this new investment account, WSB will also offer the 26-week Money Market Certificate* to IRA depositors.

IRA deposits are also backed by the FDIC and by Wyandotte Savings Bank's 110-year history of safety, strength and dependability. Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty and loss of tax deductibility for early withdrawal of IRA funds.

For more information about starting an IRA, call or stop by your nearest Wyandotte Savings Bank office. You can "Bank On Us."[®]

*Compounding of interest on the 26-week Money Market Certificate is prohibited.

Jak Warren Memorial

Wayne wrestlers capture inaugural tourney title

Jak Warren would have been proud of "his boys". They didn't quit. Each contributed in his own way. And they wound up with the first place trophy.

That's about how it went during the inaugural Jak Warren Memorial Wrestling Tournament, staged at Wayne Memorial, and won by the host.

Wayne compiled 175 points to beat out Plymouth Salem for top honors. Salem garnered 143 points and was followed by Portage Northern (109), Lakeview (94), Belleville (70½), Flint Hamady (54), Thurston (53½) and Brighton (41).

Warren was a longtime devoted Wayne High wrestling fan who won respect from local and state coaching and wrestling officials for his devotion and sincerity to high school sports. He died last April of an apparent heart attack.

"The tournament ran very smoothly in spite of the fact we didn't have Jak with us and I'm sure he would be glad about that," said Wayne's John Wood, a longtime associate of Mr. Warren's, and also a Zebra coach.

Before the competition got underway, there was a moment of silence for Mr. Warren, but, as Wood pointed out: "Jak never wanted to be the center of attention. His was a work accomplished efficiently without all the fanfare."

Wayne picked up two individual gold medals as Paul Justice won the 109-pound class and teammate Dan Matauch was crowned the champ at 119. Plymouth Salem's outstanding athlete, Marty Piper, earned the Most Pins Trophy and the gold for the heavyweight class.

Another highlight of the meet was the return of ex-Wayne grappler Pat Gizzi who is present coach at Portage Northern. Gizzi wrestled for Wayne's Don Haney during the 1957-68 campaign, the first campaign in Wayne's long history. He was credited with the first Wayne victory via a pin. It came against Edsel Ford in 1957.

Belleville earned a gold medal thanks to 112-pounder Brock Nigg who reached the finals and met Lakeview's Greg Saxton. Saxton succumbed 5-0 to the Tiger grappler.

And Salem also had a winner in Bruce Bachman who defeated Lakeview's Jack Jeppesen for top honors in the 145-pound class, 14-5.

Coach Ron Krueger's Rocks also sparkled in the 167-pound class where Beaudoin finished in the gold, and the Suburban 8 Conference powerhouse picked up a first through Scott Wickers' performance in the 185-pound class as Wickens stopped Wayne's James Besbitt, 9-0.

Belleville's senior grappler Jim Richendollar wrapped up the evening's wrestling with a convincing victory over Flint Hamady's Fred Anger, winning on a 2:41 fall.

Vintage year?

Salem's Coach Thomann may have another cage champion

Just how good is this season's version of the Plymouth Salem Rocks?

Even Coach Fred Thomann doesn't know the answer to that question. But he'll get a very good indication this week.

The veteran builder of cage powers was to be tested severely this week when his Rocks traveled to play Ypsilanti Tuesday night before hosting a good Dearborn Edsel Ford squad at 8 p.m. Friday night in Suburban "8" League play.

A lot of coaches would like to have Thomann's 4-1 record (not to mention his group of players) at this point in the season. "We're making good progress in finding what we can and cannot do," Thomann said during the holiday break. "I've been trying different combinations on the court and I'm pretty well convinced who can do what on the court for us."

The veteran coach says his team is not "where we want to be" but we're working on it. "We're continually making adjustments to see what works the best."

Some observers have called this another "vintage Salem basketball team." Thomann, while pleased with the talent of his players, admits to some weaknesses also. "We seem to have a lot of players with the same size and individual abilities — so that means the scoring will be spread out over more people. However, there are quite a few good athletes on our team which gives us good bench strength. And, of course, defense is the name of the game so whoever plays good defense will see a lot of playing action."

Thomann said he starts with defense in his philosophy of the game. "Then after I have the five best defensive players, I add to that whatever is needed, a ballhandler, a rebounder, scorer or whatever," he said. "David Miller is our best player in all phases of the game. His play-making, defense, scoring and rebounding is excellent."

Thomann says he'll take his several players who score 10 to 12 points a game and play excellent defense to a 20 to 25-point per game player who lacks defensive skills or takes an inordinate number of shots to get his point total.

"I'm happy with our large number of players who can go out and do a good job. Sometimes fans get hung up on the flashy guy who can score 18 or 20 points a game but fail to realize that his man has scored perhaps 15 or 12 himself. I'd rather have several 12-point players, playing good defense, than one flashy player collecting a whole lot of points."

"Of course, players have different skills and are talented in different areas of the game so you try to utilize their ability to the fullest benefit of the team."

And it definitely is "the team" that Thomann thinks of first. "I don't care how good a scorer a player is, or how talented, he must blend his talents into the flow of the team so everyone benefits."

Thomann was happy with his team's fine comeback against Canton in its only loss of the season. "We came back in the Canton game from a 12-point deficit to finally take the lead in the last quarter, but they scored right away and won the game. We fought back but didn't quite have enough to pull out the victory. It will be interesting to see how our players respond in future games."

Thomann feels for this year's Salem cage squad to reach its potential the players must do several things. "Everyone must be willing to contribute every time they step on the court. They must do the things that bring victory — like taking a charge, blocking out and rebounding and moving well without the ball."

"They need to do all the hard things, give themselves unselfishly and let the team come first. That's how we'll build another winner at Salem this year — if the players are ready and willing to make that commitment," said Thomann, who has built many winners over his long years as a coach at Salem.

Despite slow start, Canton cage coach says he's confident

Canton cage coach Dave Van Wagoner took the recent holiday break to assess his team's 1-5 record and look forward to the league race and the meat of the 1981-82 season. The Chiefs clash with Walled Lake Western at home Friday night in a Western Six League game at 8 p.m. after hosting Farmington on Tuesday.

"I'm not discouraged at all," said the rookie coach. "We have lost five games but they were against top teams like Ypsilanti, Livonia Stevenson and Thurston. Two of our losses were to Stevenson, which has a real fine group of athletes, and another defeat came from Farmington Harrison for our first Western Six League loss."

Van Wagoner said that first league loss was the biggest disappointment he has endured in his first season as varsity coach. Even bigger than getting blown out 6-38 by Stevenson in the Christmas Tournament finals at Salem's gym?

"Yes, I look at the first league loss as the most disappointing. Winning the Western Six title is high on our list of goals."

Van Wagoner said the Chiefs' top goal was to reach their potential in all phases of their game. "We work hard trying to get each player to develop in all areas of the game and that is our first priority. We feel the rest will fall into place if we do that."

"Secondly, we want to win the Western Six League championship. If we work hard, I believe we can battle for the conference title." This is the last year for the Western Six, although many of the same teams will be aligned in a brand new two-division league next fall. Plymouth Salem will be in the other division and play Canton in one league game and a non-league game next basketball season. The Chiefs and Salem Rocks will clash in a Christmas basketball game in place of the recent tournament because all the teams involved will be included in the new league.

"Our third goal," the first-year mentor said, "is to get things working together as a team so we can make a long tournament run."

Canton will host the District playoffs of the state tournament in the first round that includes Plymouth Salem, Garden City East, Westland John Glenn and Wayne Memorial. These same teams were involved last year and Glenn took an exciting 48-46 victory over Wayne for the district title at Salem. The winner will go on to the Ypsilanti regional.

Van Wagoner was asked what he needed to be a consistent winner this season. "How about a 6-foot-9 center?" he deadpanned. "In order to be a winner, we need to get everyone involved in our offense. We need to run our fast break offense a lot more. We're small and rely on our fast break and our quickness."

He pointed to the victory over Salem in the Christmas Tournament as his biggest pleasure so far in his first year at the helm of the Canton Chiefs. He listed his loss to Harrison in the Western Six opener as his biggest disappointment so far.

Canton has been practicing hard for its league meeting with Walled Lake Western Friday night at home after hosting Farmington in a non-league clash on Tuesday of this week.

"We all have to work a lot harder if we want to accomplish the things we have set out to do," Van Wagoner said.

Coach Dan Henry mused over John Glenn's 2-4 record during the holiday break and saw some very encouraging signs despite the somewhat slow start by the Rocket cagers.

"I was hoping to be at least .500 at this point, but we're not disappointed because we've been in every game we've played," he pointed out. "What we need, I feel, is a team leader on the floor for our younger players. We have a lot of juniors and sophomores and I'd like to see more leadership exemplified by our seniors."

Henry, now in his third year as head coach of Glenn, is trying to rebuild after seeing last year's team finish with a 17-6 record which included a district championship in the State Tournament.

"Our younger kids are improving. Two sophomores — Todd Stein and Jeff Hawley — and junior Jack Walker have given us a real boost. These three are highly regarded by many who have seen

Coveted and elusive Black Belts exemplify top performance and excellency in the Art of Self Defense known as karate. And karate expert Ron Rose, who is the chief instructor at the Wayne Karate Studio, has trained more than his share of Black Belts. Fox lists

Wayne is offering indoor golf classes

To keep in the "swing of things" during the cold months the Wayne Recreation is offering an Indoor Golf Program.

There are driving nets, chipping mats, and putting greens available for practice.

The program schedule is: Womens Tuesday Morning Golf — January 5 until April 13 from 10 a.m. to noon;

Mens Tuesday Evening Golf — Tuesday evenings January 5 until April 13 from 7 - 9 p.m.;

Mens & Womens Golf — Thursday evenings January 7th until April 15th from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The Tuesday morning and Thursday evening sessions will also have available a professional to assist anyone who needs help. The indoor golf is open to the avid golfer for practice or any who may want to try golfing for the first time.

A seasonal card will cost $2.50 for Wayne residents and $4.50 for non-residents for each session available.

The Wayne Recreation is also offering the golf area open for Drop-in during specified hours. The seasonal pass will cost $3.00 for residents and $6.00 for non-residents.

Undefeated Glenn grapplers win Minert Invitational

Westland John Glenn grapplers launched the New Year the way they ended the old one—in victory.

Coach Bob Lusk's wrestlers traveled to Flint where they competed in the Minert Invitational hosted by Flint Beecher. And when all of the wrestling was over, the Westlanders had themselves an impressive first place trophy.

Glenn garnered 190 points to outdistance their nearest challenger, Battle Creek Harper Creek, which finished second with 124. Trailing the two front-runners were, in order, Midland (120½), Saginaw (84), Flint Beecher (80), Milford Lakeland (66), DeWitt (65½), and Flint Central (18).

Lusk said he was very pleased with the final results.

"You have to be pleased when you see that everyone of your wrestlers contribute points toward the over-all victory," the veteran coach added.

The Westlanders will be back on the mats Thursday. They'll defend their Northwest Suburban conference title against league rival, Livonia Franklin, at home in a dual meet which begins at 7 p.m.

"I was hoping to be at least .500 at this point, but we're not disappointed because we've been in every game we've played," he pointed out. "What we need, I feel, is a team leader on the floor for our younger players. We have a lot of juniors and sophomores and I'd like to see more leadership exemplified by our seniors."

Henry, now in his third year as head coach of Glenn, is trying to rebuild after seeing last year's team finish with a 17-6 record which included a district championship in the State Tournament.

"Our younger kids are improving. Two sophomores — Todd Stein and Jeff Hawley — and junior Jack Walker have given us a real boost. These three are highly regarded by many who have seen them play this season. Walker made the all-tournament team during the Christmas Classic and Stein narrowly missed the honor. Many are impressed with Jeff Hawley's fine shooting ability."

Henry said he's very optimistic about the Rockets' chances in the Northwest Suburban League. "We're 1-1, tied for second with Livonia Franklin and North Farmington and just behind Thurston's 2-0 mark," he said.

John Glenn will be tested early against Franklin and North Farmington on the road. After a non-league clash at Cherry Hill on Tuesday of this week, Glenn travels to play at Franklin this Friday night and then invades North Farmington next Tuesday in early showdown battles.

"Franklin is very hard to beat at home and we'll have to see how our younger players respond on the road," Henry said.

In order to win consistently, Henry said the Rockets need to improve several facets of their game.

"We definitely need to rebound better. Walker is rebounding well, but he needs help on the boards. Todd Stein is improving his rebounding, but we need more help from some of our bigger players — and we don't have very many of those."

"I'm not happy with our defense. Our players just have not seemed to catch on to what we want them to do defensively. They work hard and are improving, but they're not playing defense like typical Glenn teams have done in the past."

"But we're optimistic about the future. We're looking forward to getting back into action. I'm anxious to see how the boys respond against Cherry Hill before we travel to Franklin Friday night."

Henry said he had a long talk with his boys during the holiday break.

"I told them there are many teams in the state that are 1-4 or 2-4 and will give up on the rest of the season. Some will quit and have a poor season. I told them it's up to them if they want to make this a meaningful season by hustling hard the rest of the year and building a winning attitude."

"It's up to them. We have a great group of kids and I'm very proud to be their coach. I believe they'll respond and play some very exciting, hustling basketball the rest of the year," Henry said.
